Committees Begin Legal Work of Bills to Go Before Legislatures of Two States-Highway Grant Is Possible.

That the proposed Pacific Highway-Columbia River bridge could be built in less than two years' time providing there was no unusual red tape at-tached to the work of construction.

there was no unusual red tape attached to the work of construction, was the opinion expressed last night by Raiph Modjeski, the Chicago engineer who drew the plans of estimate for the proposed structure, before the joint meeting of the Vancouver and Portiand bridge committees at the Commercial Club. Present from Vancouver were John H. Elwell, W. P. Connawsy, George McCoy and A. B. Eastham; and of the Portiand committee, Frank B. Rliey, chairman; Whitney I. Boise, J. H. Nolta, E. G. Crawford and W. M. Killingsworth.

A committee consisting of Mr. Riley, Mr. Boise, M. G. Munly and John F. Logan was designated by the Portland wing of the Joint committee to study all angles of the bridge question from a legal standpoint and to embody their conclusions in a bill to be presented for adoption either by the Legislature or at a public election in Oregon. This committee will frequently confer with a similar committee to be chosen today, perhaps, by the Vancouver committeemen in order that each of the bills in the two states.

Highway Grant Possible.

The practical agreement reached by the committees was that $1,000,000 should be raised for the general erection of the main bridge, from Vancouver to Hayden Island, by each of the two states and that the Oregon side should bear the expense of the long approach necessitated on the Multhomah side of the stream. The Vancouver members expressed the belief that they might be able to secure a grant of $500,000 from the public highway fund of the State of Washington and that the rest of the funds needed could be raised in Vancouver, Clark County and district adjacent thereto. It was felt that if Clark County could improve the Pacific Highway, which runs through its territory, as approach to the proposed bridge, that the entire campaign would be helped immeasureably throughout the state, as neasureably throughout the state, as nuch complaint has been heard re-ently about the condition of the roads

Anticipating the criticism which is apt to be leveled at the bill, the committee realize that it will be almost compulsory for the counties to show their good faith by doing their share of the work, in large measure, at least, before the proposition is put up to the Legislature. They are frank in admitting that a hard fight is before them, but each member seems confident of ultimate success. It was agreed that it was agreed that the rentals received by the bridge management from the strectear users would more than cover the cost of upteep.

Commissioner Shows That Deftly Worded Provision Exempts From Taxation Personal Property and Improvements.

It was not until Charles V. Galloway, State Tax Commissioner, exposed the "Joker" in the so-called "graduated specific tax and exemption amendment" and read a letter from a "real" single-tax advocate denouncing the proposed measure as "wrong in principle and indefensible in its appeal to class prejudice," that the joint discussion on single tax between him and H. Mr. Galloway had called attention to the fact that the proposed amendment included a deftly worded provision exempting personal property and improvements from taxation. "Instead of apecifically declaring for the exemption from taxation of personal property and improvements," said Mr. Galloway, "the amendment reads: The peor le of any county may at any time, by a county law, assess and tax personal property and improvements on, in and under land in their county, but except as such property may be assessed and taxed by and under such county laws, the same is exempt from taxation in Oregon."

If the basic principles of the single tax are sound, they can be established by a reasonable and truthful education, and any attempt to establish them by other methods must in the long run fail.
