

COTTEHRILL TELLS OF CLEAR-UP WORK

W. C. T. U. in Night Session Hear Mayor of Seattle Speak of Vice War.

RECALL MOVE NOT FEARED

Power of Woman's Suffrage in Fighting Liquor Discussed by Delegates—Miss Rowan Explains Work Among Children.

In addition to the addresses given by noted speakers of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the audience that crammed the White Temple from top to bottom at the evening session of the conference had an opportunity of listening to an address from Mayor Cotterill, of Seattle, who gave an able account of the actual working of suffrage and of the aid it had been to prohibition.

He told how the work outlined by the W. C. T. U. was similar in practically every way to the Good Templar plan, formulated by himself and carried out without fear or favor.

His opening remarks were more or less devoted to the offering of congratulations and felicitations to the visitors first of all and to the hostesses as well.

Theory is Practical. Referring to the notice in his own state Mayor Cotterill told how the work of the Union was the same as his own, and in this connection he said:

"I want to say now, just as I said before when the question was a theoretical one, that experience has proved my ideas to be right. I said then that if any man said to me 'Prohibition does not prohibit,' I would reply 'Regulation does not regulate, segregation does not separate, and the thing to remember—and the greatest thing to remember—is this, recognition by the city authorities of any form of evil, vice or crime, more than anything else, aggravates and increases the evil.'

Mayor Cotterill then went on to tell of the recall petition against him being circulated in Seattle. He showed what a poor thing it would be, and his opposition not to get the required number of signatures to secure the petition making good when there were but 400 votes and his opponent a defeated opponent at the general election.

But he said that when the election came off, if come it did, he was confident he would be re-elected, not by 400, but by 4000, and that the city was on trial, not he.

Another speaker of note, and one whose address showed how great a joy it was for her to work, was Miss Edna Rowan, the general secretary of the Loyal Tea and Traffic League, the branch to which the youngest women belong.

Miss Rowan told of the work they were doing in educating and in equipping the boys and girls, thereby making them, as she proudly asserted, future citizens worth while. Specific instances of the good that has been done and of the good that came in after years were cited.

Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, the president of the Rhode Island W. C. T. U., spoke on the traffic problem, pointing that prevention of drinking opportunities was the cure rather than an increase in the number of state penitentiaries.

Other diseases, notably poverty and moral sin, followed in the trail of inebriety, while the traffic in women was a combination of political and social evils, the effort to save these women going hand in hand with the attempt to abolish the indulgence in liquor.

Ballot's Power Realized. In this connection the power of the ballot was a real assistance and Mrs. Livingston was at pains to show up the arguments of the anti-suffragists by giving figures to prove the fallacy of their statements in relation to the suggestion that the vote of the bad woman would outweigh that of the good, she said that there were in Rhode Island prisons 100 women, and in reply to the suggestion that the vote of the illiterate woman was not wanted, she said that the illiterate men outnumbered the literate men by four.

She continued that 90 percent of the school teachers were women and that it was these women who taught the great politicians of the day, their rudiments of civil government, that men as well as women could be found who did not want the vote and that in those states where women had the vote the percentage of female voters in proportion was greater than that of the male.

Suffrage is not a panacea for all ills, she said, "but it is an excellent poultice for some of them, as Seattle knew to its benefit."

At the conclusion of her address Mrs. Frances Graham, the leader of the music, sang the battle song "Victory." Apples and other fruit sent by various towns and hamlets in Oregon were distributed first to those visitors who came from afar and then to the ones near at home.

Today the election of officers to go as delegates to the World's Convention and the great medal contest will be the outstanding features of what is looked upon as one of the busiest days of the week.

DINNERS ADD TO PROGRAMME W. C. T. U. Members Busy Enjoying Social Side of Week.

Among the leading events, from a social point of view, at the Woman's Christian Temperance Union conference have been the dinners that have been and are being given throughout the week. Yesterday at noon 300 members took luncheon at the Multnomah Hotel. Speeches were made by leading women and by men, most of them being congratulatory to the hostesses of the convention.

In the evening a most interesting reunion was that of some members, who, "for want of a better name," call themselves the "Travel Club." These women first met at the international convention held in Glasgow, Scotland, two years ago. Ever since that time they have met together, promising each other to meet yearly. Last night they met once more at the Hawthorne, and recalled the joys of previous meetings.

On Monday night 100 members dined at the Mallory Hotel as guests of the union press. The two National papers, the Union Signal and the Young Crusader, were reinforced by representatives of the 36 states which have state papers of their own.

Today the various states hold their own private banquets, the New York state always having a large muster.
