HONORED HELDERS
Many Citizens on Committee
Selected to Work for Rushlight.
SPEECHES ARE PLANNED
Number of Women Among Callers at Headquarters Now in Charge of Former Secretary to City's Chief Executive.

Acting upon orders from the executive committee of the Rushlight campaign committee, George K. McCord, manager, last night named 169 citizens from different walks of life to assist in the effort throughout the city to re-elect the Mayor.

The list was selected from names which had been submitted to Mayor Rushlight from time to time by citizens who had tendered their services to him in his campaign for re-election. Fully 89 per cent of them, said Mr. McCord, were volunteers. Many more volunteered, but he selected some from a list of names sent in by persons who wished to help.

The committee of 169 consists of men of varied occupations, including millionaires, working men and professional men. They will work in various sections of the city wherever their services are needed. Many of them have already loaned their automobiles to convey persons who are ill to the Courthouse, in order to give assistance with a request by Mrs. A. C. Newill, president of the Civic Progress Circles.

ASSESSMENT CUT ASKED
Washington Street Owners, Second to Sixteenth, Make Plea.

Property owners and representatives of property owners on Washington street, between Second and Sixteenth streets, called on County Assessor Theodore J. Dunning, yesterday, to request a reduction from Mr. Sigler's valuations. They contended that assessed valuations on the street as made by B. D. Sigler, Mr. Reed's predecessor, are in many cases excessive, and that the revenues derived from them, in some cases, is stated, not more than 2 per cent is being realized on investments.

WAGNER IS HONORED HERE
Centennial Celebration at Masonic Temple Hugs Success.

Masonic Temple auditorium was comfortably filled last night by an audience gathered to celebrate the centennial of Richard Wagner, and the event was a big success. A concert was given by the Arion Society, of about 25 voices, under the direction of Lucien E. Becker, the programme of German music, most of it by Wagner, being of pronounced excellence and finely rendered.

have served under the classified civil service for less than six years must again take their examinations, but this is denied by some of the framers of the proposed charter.

CURSE OF TEMPERAMENT IS NOT FELT BY ACTOR

Neither Does Uncontrolled Temper Worry Leo Dittrichstein in Real Life, Although Both Run Rampant Few Hours Nightly in "The Concert."

BY LEON CARR BAER.
No one afflicted with what is nowadays a recognized curse—the artistic temperament—can get a better or a quicker eye-opener in two or three of the underlying principles of the present charter than by witnessing Leo Dittrichstein's portrayal of his of ethereal imbalance in "The Concert" and then meeting him for a real, really great art with the personal Dittrichstein, at his hand, now far removed from such exhibitions in his personal life.

Leo is not so troubled. In spite of which Leo Dittrichstein has neither temperament in the acutely artistic form, nor its plain step-sister temper. The two are so often confused. Coming away from the theater two old ladies who padded along in the wake of Mr. Dittrichstein's display of artistic disorder were the inevitable revelation of the personal man. I told him about it in proportions of a thousand mixtures. The statements being circulated that any civil service employee must have been in the service six years or be compelled to take a new examination in case the amendments providing for commission form of government go into effect is therefore incorrect. Any examination of the proposed amendments will show that they constitute amendments of different sections of the old charter and not an enactment of an entire new charter.

interview can be put together between bites of fried chicken and perfectly marvelous salad—the dressing of which Mr. D. mixed—with such close attention to detail and exact proportions of a thousand mixtures. The statements being circulated that any civil service employee must have been in the service six years or be compelled to take a new examination in case the amendments providing for commission form of government go into effect is therefore incorrect. Any examination of the proposed amendments will show that they constitute amendments of different sections of the old charter and not an enactment of an entire new charter.

He did, however, tell me that the whole morning had been passed at a nursery—no, not the kind you're thinking of, but one where they bought 50 little cherry trees and as many apple trees to send back to Stamford, Conn., where he had a little watermelon, said Mr. D. These, too, are to be grown on the Connecticut farm.

This is the first trip to the Pacific Coast Mr. Dittrichstein has made, and in telling of it he reverses the story of the little boy who said he didn't mind going to school so much, but what he disliked was staying when he got there. Mr. Dittrichstein says he's in love with the Coast, now he's here. But what drives him mad is the long jumps, sameness of scenery and changes in climate it took to arrive. "It's some distance," says Leo.

CHARTER 'JOKER' IS FEARED
Police Think Civil Service Clause in Proposed Draft is Faulty.

Members of the police department will fight the adoption of the proposed commission charter, on the ground that it is inimical to the interests of civil service, they held a meeting yesterday morning at which they were addressed by Guy Lombard, Republican candidate for Mayor. Mr. Lombard pointed out to them that under the proposed charter, it is possible for a Mayor who is hostile to civil service to destroy its effect.

A large number of the policemen met in the Police Athletic Association Hall, believe that there is a joker in the civil service provisions of the new charter, in that, they think, all who

There is some among the voters as to the effect of the commission charter amendments upon civil service. The amendments to be submitted do not constitute a new charter. They are simply amendments of the present charter providing for a commission form of government and where the civil service provisions of the present charter have not been amended, they will stand exactly as they do now. Since the sections of the present charter are not changed or repealed it is immaterial to every civil service employe, so far as his position is concerned, whether the commission amendments proposed are enacted or not.

Merely because the provisions in the present charter as to civil service are repeated in the pamphlet sent out does not mean that they are to be re-enacted. The statements being circulated that any civil service employee must have been in the service six years or be compelled to take a new examination in case the amendments providing for commission form of government go into effect is therefore incorrect. Any examination of the proposed amendments will show that they constitute amendments of different sections of the old charter and not an enactment of an entire new charter.
