

CARNIVAL SPIRIT RULES AT ARMORY

Men of Pasadena and Oakland and Portland Rosarians Dance Before Monarchs.

GAY SERPENTINE FORMED

Rex Oregonus, Miss Spokane and Ruler of Oaks See Subjects Revel to Tune of 'Everybody's Doin' It' and Beat of Tomtoms.

Dancing about the Armory in a joyous ragtime serpentine, while the bandmen blew their instruments until they were black in the face, men of Pasadena and Oakland and Portland Rosarians gave way to the promptings of the madcap spirit of carnival and marked the opening night of the Rose Festival with such a whirl of color and mirth as Portland had seldom seen before.

Three merry monarchs and a queen smiled upon the singing, surging crowd from their thrones and lent their sanction to a display of barbaric dancing and singing that put far in the shade the performances of the Blackfoot Indians that had preceded it.

Dance Swirls Around Thrones. There was Rex Oregonus, and there was Harrison W. Drummond, King of the Pasadena Tournament of Roses; there was Fred E. Reed, Monarch of All the Oaks, and Margaret Mole, who rules as 'Miss Spokane' over the 'Enakops,' and round and round their thrones whirled the crimson-coated Pasadena knights, the white and blue Oaks and the white-clad Rosarians.

The stir of the festival spirit caught them even before they started to the Armory, where it was to culminate. Before 7:30 the Royal Rosarians invaded the Arcadian Gardens at the Multnomah Hotel to sing and cheer for their guests from Pasadena. C. C. Chapman developed a bright idea and led in the Oakland High School band. Through the grill and round about all the tables swept the impromptu serpentine that materialized the instant the band struck into 'Everybody's Doin' It.'

Gay Thrang Swings Through Hotel. Up rose the Knights of Pasadena in their brilliant hunting uniforms and through the grill and the lobby of the hotel swung and circled the line, intermingled with the scarlet coats and high hats and the white Rosarian uniforms with the white banded sashes.

The serpentine broke, but as long as the band would play the lobby was filled with 'ragtime' couples. When the committee on entertainment stopped the band and led it outside would the crowd forego its dance. Miss Spokane, King Drummond, of Pasadena, and Rex Oregonus were in the parade that started from the Multnomah Hotel to the Armory. Passing the Oregon Hotel they were joined by the Monarch of the Oaks and his retinue. Each king was surrounded by his retainers. Miss Spokane was escorted by a guard of the Blackfoot Indians, who are making their headquarters at the Multnomah.

Rex Oregonus Loudly Cheered. The entry into the Armory gave an effect of cumulative enthusiasm. Cheered tumultuously by the crowds that filled the lower floor and the galleries, Rex Oregonus entered the hall and ascended his throne, while his bodyguard of Rosarians, uncovering themselves on each side of the dais. With the beating of tom-toms Miss Spokane passed through the entrance surrounded by her painted retainers. As she seated herself at the right of Rex Oregonus amid an increased outburst of applause, the Indians settled themselves upon the steps of the dais, and the brilliant scarlet coats of the Knights of Pasadena appeared at the entrance.

King Drummond in his full regalia walked before him and when he had given his obeisance before the king, was invited to a seat at his left. The knights passed in front of the throne and ranked themselves in a solid double file in front of the dais facing the monarchs.

Oaks Chime to Scene. While it seemed that the enthusiasm of the crowd could mount no higher, amid the blare of the band the Monarch of the Oaks, huge and bearded and clothed in flowing robes of silk and velvet, strode into the Armory at the head of five score marching 'Oaks.'

The crowd simply accomplished the impossible as he entered, and he led out a notch further than one could have imagined, and amid the keeling tumult of sound the king took his place beside Miss Spokane, while his retainers ranged themselves before the Pasadena files.

J. A. Currey, president of the Rose Show, mounting the steps of the dais, turned over to the monarch of the Festival the Rose Show, and, in behalf of Rex Oregonus, C. C. Chapman, of the Rosarians, accepted the courtesy and expressed the thanks of the King, not only to his august subjects for their support, but to the other rulers who had come with their followers to join him in the festival in honor of the rose.

The Monarch of the Oaks, acknowledging the courtesy that Rex Oregonus had shown in inviting him as a co-ruler with the king of the festival, gave back to him, however, the scepter that having issued only two edicts: that all faithful subjects of the rose should accompany the king on his pilgrimage to the far Northwest, and that they should return the visit of the Oaks within the coming year.

Pasadena Song Bursts Forth. King Drummond rose and, as he bowed to Rex Oregonus, the Knights of Pasadena burst into their song in honor of Portland, with which they have celebrated their trip all the way from California.

At a gesture from Miss Spokane, James White Grass, of the Blackfoot tribe, advanced to the throne and gave an oration in his native tongue greeting the king in behalf of the Indians. The files of the Oaks and Pasadena knights gave back and in the circle formed before the throne the Indians danced to a dance of greeting.

The drum-toms and the sing-song chanting of the Indians caught the crowd and soon everyone was swaying to the rhythm. As the Indians closed their dance, the band struck into 'Everybody's Doin' It.' The rhythm was precisely that of the tom-toms that had gone before.

Forward swung the Rosarians, hands on shoulders, and zigzagged before the dais in a lively serpentine.

Brilliant Serpentine Forms. The scarlet ranks of the Pasadena knights broke and they sprang forward to drop in alternately between the Rosarians in the line. Into the growing serpentine came the Oaks, while the bass drummer transformed big drum into a giant tom-tom and the bandmen blew 'Everybody's Doin' It' as they had never played it before. The dancers varied their rag steps by kicking out sideways, facetiously. The those of previous seasons. On the first float will ride His Floral Majesty, Rex Oregonus. He will be masked to-night, but in the final parade on Saturday night he will appear for the first time without his disguise. The other floats, in the order of their appearance, will be as follows:

2—The Royal Rose. 3—Pansy and Diamond. 4—Rose and Onyx. 5—Coral and Sea Flowers. 6—Daisy and Crystal. 7—Ruby and Morning Glory. 8—Jade and Harebell. 9—Rose and Sapphire. 10—Emerald and Wisteria. 11—Amethyst and Chrysanthemum. 12—Thistle and Turquoise. 13—Cats Eye and Geranium. 14—Poppy and Opals. 15—Poinsettia and Blood Stone. 16—Lotus and Pearl. 17—Orchid and Opals. 18—Tiger Lily.

The motorcycle parade this morning will be the first event of the kind ever presented on the Pacific Coast. It will be conducted under the auspices of the Portland Motorcycle Club. More than 400 decorated machines will participate. Liberal prizes have been offered for excellence in decoration. There is much rivalry among the motorcyclists. A silver cup will be given for the best entry in the parade, regardless of its classification.

Many Prizes Offered. First, second and third prize awards will be made in each of the following classes: Best decorated tandem, best trimmed machine ridden by woman, best decorated side car, best decorated commercial car, best decorated machine ridden by best out-of-town messenger boy, best out-of-town entry, most grotesque entry and oldest machine in line. De Witt L. Harry, state referee for the American Federation of Motorcyclists, will have charge of the event.

Besides these two spectacular features the day's programme will contain many interesting and pleasant events.

Band concerts will be held throughout the morning and afternoon, both local and visiting bands participating. The Rose show will continue at the Armory and no doubt will attract its usual quota of visitors. 'Dawn Mist,' one of the Blackfoot Indian maids, who is here from Glacier National Park, will hold a reception for children at the Armory. The little folks speak to them in their own languages.

The Royal Rosarians will play hosts to their guests from California and other cities and will conduct them on sight-seeing excursions up the Willamette and Columbia Rivers.

The United Artisans, who are holding their annual convention in Portland this week, will offer unique entertainment at Council Crest this afternoon. A monster barbecue will be served to all visiting Artisans. Other mediums of pleasure also will be offered.

The public is invited to go on board the United States cruiser St. Louis in the lower harbor. It is anchored just below the Broadway bridge and is accessible by launches. A reception will be given from 1 to 5 P. M. today.

Swofford Pioneer Dies. CHEHALIS, Wash., June 9. (Special.)—T. C. Jordan, a well-known resident of Swofford, in Eastern Lewis County, died this week and was buried yesterday. Mr. Jordan was born July 9, 1852, in Alabama. Later the family moved to Texas, and in 1890 Mr. Jordan came to Lewis County, where he had resided ever since. A widow and 11-year-old son survive him, also a brother, C. N. Jordan, of Swofford. Mr. Jordan was one of the well-known pioneers of Eastern Lewis County, and had many friends.

EVERY VISITOR SHOULD BE GIVEN BOUQUET OF ROSES EVERY DAY. It will be possible for Portland people to extend typical carnival hospitality to the city's guests in fitting and substantial manner by simply providing them with roses to be carried or worn each day of the festival.

It is necessary only for Portland residents to clip a bundle of choice roses each morning and take to any one of the hotels where visitors are registered or to the cruiser St. Louis. The hotel managers have arranged to have them distributed in the rooms of their patrons. It is aimed to have a fresh supply each morning.

It is a lamentable fact that in previous years many visitors have come from distant points to enjoy the beauties and glories of the festival season without ever coming in personal contact with a single one of the flowers that give the carnival its aim.

Now it will be possible to supply everyone who comes here with a substantial reminder that Portland's soil and Portland's genial climate are capable of producing the choicest flowers that bloom.

PASADENA HONORS ROSE FESTIVAL

Knights and Ladies From Beautiful California City Here on Visit.

RETURN CALL ENJOYABLE

Great Feature of Tournament of Roses' Participation in Festivities Will Be Entry of Drill Team in Horse and Vehicle Parade.

THE FESTIVAL CALL.
By Doris Collins.

The Festival is on us
With its merry rush and rout,
And Portland warbles to the world:
"The latching-in' hanging out!
Come in, come in, and join the din
Of caroling and fun—
We've roses here for all the world!
A bug for everyone."
Ho, sons of San Diego,
Fair Panama's bold lords;
Ho, knights of Pasadena,
The Southern rose guards;
Ho, Royal Oaks of Oakland,
Attend ye to our call—
"The Festival of Roses
With roses here for all,
Ho, Tillikums, whose totems
Tell of the Potlatch gay;
Ho, Montanara Tigris,
Who march in bright array;
Ho, "Enakops," and all who know
The festival is on us,
Portland gives honor to the Rose;
And you are welcome there,
Ho, for the marching pageants;
Ho, for the pennons fair;
Ho, for the phiring petals
Of million roses fair.
The Festival is on us,
With all its merry rout,
And to the world our call is whirled:
"The latching-in' hanging out!"

Frank G. Hogan, 1166 lord of the Knights of the Pasadena Tournament of Roses, led into Portland yesterday morning on the "Rose Special" a train of more than 100 knights and ladies who have come to the Rose Festival as their annual pilgrimage since the organization of the association, to return the visit of the Royal Rosarians which was made in Pasadena, January 1.

"If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery," Pasadena pays eloquent tribute to Portland, "is the gracious expression of the Knights of the Tournament of Roses of their purpose in organizing and in making their pilgrimage.

The visit is primarily a return of the visit of the Rosarians' visit to Pasadena, but after the party disbanded here at the close of the Rose Festival, many of the knights will continue individually on trips to Alaska.

Headquarters in Multnomah. The Pasadena party makes its headquarters at the Multnomah Hotel, and is preparing to take an active part in the celebrations of the Festival week. The great feature of their participation in the Festival will be the entry of their drill team in the horse and vehicle parade, Thursday afternoon.
