

MORRIS GIRL TO RAY RUN TO CAMINETTI

Prisoner Declares He Will Not Contradict Story as Told by Young Miss.

DIGGS IS ASKED TO LEAVE

Defense Attorneys Make Suggestion to Convicted Member of Famous Reno Party—Wealthy Men Have Place on Jury.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—With no crowds storming the courtroom doors for admittance; no stylishly dressed women filling the spectators' seats and with only a number of morbid boiters capping their ears for the testimony of the witnesses, the trial of E. Drew Caminetti, charged with violating the Mann white slave act, proceeded today before the jury that was selected before the morning session was over.

The atmosphere is different than during the trial of Maury I. Diggs, companion of Caminetti, who was convicted a week ago under the same accusation.

In the Diggs case the intense general interest was manifested by the large attendance and the variety of people attracted. In the Caminetti case half the seats in the courtroom are vacant, the excitement has given way to a monotonous procedure and every one, even the defense, seems anxious to hurry and have the thing over.

Miss Norris on Stand Today.

Miss Lola Norris, the Sacramento girl Caminetti is accused of having endeavored to seduce, was called to the stand today. She is expected by counsel, Theodore Roche, Assistant United States District Attorney, said that her testimony would be identical with that given in the case of Diggs. Miss Warrington will follow her on the stand.

Prosecutor Roche made his statement to the government's case almost identical with that heard by the Diggs jury, with one exception.

"One thing more," he concluded, "and this is the most important in my statement."

"We intend to prove that Lola Norris was a pure and virtuous girl up to the time she met Caminetti and that she was not a prostitute. We shall prove to you from the lips of Lola Norris herself."

Caminetti Not to Test.

Caminetti has already announced that he will not testify, nothing to which Lola Norris may testify.

Roche said the Government would not seek to prove that Caminetti bought the tickets, but that he gave Lola Norris $20 to buy her tickets, and that later Diggs said: "There must be a leader to this party," and bought the tickets himself.

Diggs attired in a natty suit of brown and seemingly in the best of spirits, took a seat next to Caminetti today. The attorneys for the defense, the assistants who attended to the wisdom of the suggestion he retired to the corridor, where he spent the rest of the day gaily chatting with deputy marshals and other attendants.

Judge's Comment Pertinent.

Just before adjournment a pertinent comment was made by Judge Van Fleet bearing directly on Caminetti's responsibility in the Reno trip. Counsel for the defense, objecting to the questions asked by Roche, seeking to show the defendant had participated in arranging and conducting the trip, said that members of the train crew had the ticket agent, S. A. Dewick, had failed to connect Caminetti with any of the transactions concerning the purchase of tickets or the engaging of the drawing-room of the train.

"It is not necessary," said the court, in overruling the objection, "to show that the defendant handled the money or made the purchase. Certainly, if the Government proves that he was in the party, under the circumstances they have set forth, it is sufficient to develop the connection of the defendant with the transaction."

Four Witnesses Testified Today. They are: R. J. Simen, ticket agent at Sacramento; M. S. Jones, the conductor of the train upon which Caminetti and his companions rode to Reno on the morning of March 10; C. H. Walbourn, the Pullman conductor, who sold Diggs the drawing-room ticket; and S. A. Dewick, the colored porter who waited on the party and helped them on and off the train.

were supposed to have been fired, exploded yesterday and blew three men high into the air. All were injured and one may not recover.

With an arm and a leg broken, his head badly crushed and internal injuries, W. C. Rainey was carried to the Oregon City Hospital after the explosion and is in a critical condition.

Before the men went on the rock crusher at First and Center streets could pick Rainey up they had to move a rock estimated to weigh four tons. Part of the boulder was resting on the body of the unconscious man. The force of the explosion blew Rainey 15 feet and piled the rock on top of him.

Rainey is 48 years of age and has a wife and several children.

Harry Cowden, 23 years of age, and Matt Follmer, 30 years, were blown 30 feet and fell in a pile of rock and dirt. Dirt was blown by the force of the blast into the flesh and the men were painfully burned about the arms, face and neck, although their other injuries were slight.

Workmen had set the 25 dynamite sticks for an explosion about 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

For some reason the blast did not fire. The men believed that it had failed through the bottom and that they would have to reset the charge and fire it again to blow out the side of the hill. They picked up their heavy coats and began the work of tamping and setting for the second charge.

"We have struck something soft," said one of the workers as his bar settled into the dynamite charge. Then came an explosion that was heard all over the city and shook the windows of the houses close to the crusher.

Fragments of broken rock, boulders that weighed several hundred pounds and tons of dirt were blown into the air and a great crevasse torn in the earth.

TWIN CITIES THREE IN LAND OF PLenty

Milton and Freewater, Rivals, Live Harmoniously, With Soil Yielding Richly.

FRUIT OUTPUT IMMENSE

Prosperous Towns in Heart of Fertile Walla Walla Valley Have Better Outlook Than Ever; Future Consolidation Likely.

BY ADDISON BENNETT.

TWIN CITIES, Umatilla County, Or., Aug. 27.—(Special Correspondence).—It would be as impossible to write an article about Freewater without mentioning Milton as it would to write about Milton without having much to say about Freewater. So I will call the two places by their names often given them and endeavor to give the reader a fair idea of their standing.

Milton was quite an old town long before Freewater was ever thought of. When the O.-W. R. & N. was built from Pendleton north to Walla Walla, the engineers found it impracticable to run directly through the little town of Milton. It missed it by a mile, or about that, and the main line of the town, for the depot is in the city limits. A few years later a little trading point started up just outside of the city limits, but near the depot. Some time ago this place began to be called Freewater, by which name it is still known. There are various stories about the cause for the establishment of this town, but it is attributed to a local attorney, who disappeared from home in West Roseburg at 11 o'clock this morning. Evans came here from Minneapolis and secured employment in the law office of O. P. Coshaw. A few weeks ago he lost this position and has since been working in various capacities. He is anxious to work this afternoon for County Judge Dexter Rice and when he failed to appear at the Court-house at the appointed time, Mr. Evans notified her. She informed Judge Rice that he left home with the intention of going to the Court-house at 11 o'clock.

Evans' disappearance became known Deputy Sheriff Stewart, County Judge Rice and a number of other persons began a search. At 9 o'clock on the morning of the missing man had been found.

Evans recently purchased a tract of land in West Roseburg on the installment plan and he had worried considerably over meeting the payments. This, coupled with the loss of his position, is attributed as the reason for his disappearance. Evans is about 30 years of age and has a wife and two children.

Town is Wonderful Valley.

This is that portion of the wonderful Walla Walla valley, belonging to Oregon. The river runs through Milton, and there separates into two streams, one being called the Little Walla Walla and the other retaining the name Walla Walla. The former flows through Freewater. The main valley lies off to the north, northeast and east, towards Walla Walla and its environs. The entire county, nearly all of it, between here and the ridge north of that city, is practically a vast garden spot, much of it covered with fruit trees. And in the entire state of Oregon there is no more prosperous section than this. While it is a fruit country, first and a garden section second, it is something being shipped almost every day from early in March until the first of the next January, and when Winter apples sell a trifle slow, as they did last year, the shipments of fruits and produce keep up the year through.

I said it is a prosperous section; I can go farther and say that it is better than before had a better outlook than it has today. Remember now I am not speaking of Milton or Freewater, but of both of them, and the district in which they are situated.

Perhaps it will be well to explain that it is an irrigated district. The annual precipitation hereabouts is often under 15 inches, and the wheat lands around get but one crop in two years. The land now in orchards and gardens was all in wheat before water was introduced. Water is taken from the Walla Walla River for much of the fruit and garden section, but a good deal of land is irrigated by pumping water from the river.

Water Rights Well Adjusted.

Irrigation here is an art. In no place that I know of do the water-users, the irrigators, get better service from the water at their disposal than here. Indeed, the water rights of this section are noted for that. Another thing—the water rights of this entire valley have been adjusted, so there is no longer any friction or disputed rights.

Each city has a good weekly newspaper. The Milton Eagle is one of the best papers in any state here, and one of the best known. It has been successfully running almost 27 years. The present proprietors are Bruce Shingle and O. E. Digion. They are making money, but everybody seems proud of the paper they are getting out.

On the Freewater side is the Freewater Times, which is in its 12th year. D. C. Sanderson and his son, S. Bevis, are the owners, editors and managers. They too are making money and getting out a good, live little sheet. Both the Times and the Eagle are all home print. Neither of them uses any plate matter.

There are two railroads here, the O.-W. R. & N. and the Walla Walla Electric. The latter has a train about every hour from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M., and several later trains. It is 13 miles to Walla Walla by the steam road, 16 by the trolley. Both of these roads are doing a wonderful business here.

Fruit Shipments Large.

Fully 100,000 carloads of fruit and vegetables will be shipped from here during the year 1913, and nobody can estimate anywhere near the number of smaller shipments. Then come the grain shipments, about 100,000 sacks, and perhaps 200 carloads of hay and alfalfa. Add to these figures the stock shipments and the merchandise shipped in, and it will be seen that the railroads, principally the O.-W. R. & N. get a big revenue from the freights handled in and out of the Twin Cities.

All the fruit this year is being handled through the Milton Fruitgrowers' Union and the Walla Walla Fruitgrowers' Association, in connection with the Pacific States Central Selling Agency. The two former see to grading, packing and shipping the products, and the latter does the selling. This is the first season of this arrangement, the local packing-houses heretofore doing their own selling. But thus far the present arrangement is more than satisfactory. W. E. Brooke, the president of the Freewater Commercial Club, said that last year the prunes (one of the big crops here) brought the shippers an average of $12.50 a ton; this year they have so far netted $15. Cherries last season were a drug at a price scarcely above the cost of freight, packing and boxes; this year they have averaged $30 a ton net. More than 210 tons were shipped East, through a San Francisco house, to be "unshipped." These were Royal Anne. It is said that a number of Royal Anne trees in the district netted their owners $15 a tree. Lots of them ran above $15 a tree. This is net, deducting all picking, packing and freight charges.

Milton Has Six Churches.

Milton is a town of churches and church people. There are six churches in the little burg—Methodist Episcopal,

Presbyterian, Adventist (Seventh Day), Baptist, Christian and Church of God. On the Freewater side they have the Catholic, the Methodist Episcopal and latter being a consolidation of several organizations of different denominations. There is also a college, the Columbia College, on the Milton side, where they educate people for the ministry. This belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church South. It has during the term about 145 students.

Whoever one may think of the towns being divided and scattered, one thing is certain—on school questions there are no divisions, no dissent or discord. All of the territory in the two places is in one school district. There is a good grade school in each town and a central high school in the center of the district, midway between the two places. There is also a small overflow grade school on the Milton side. The taxable property of the district exceeds $1,000,000, so the tax is low. Governor J. S. Fowler is a frequent visitor and principal of the high school. He is said to be an efficient man, one who maintains the best of discipline and yet retains the esteem of his teachers and the people. In both towns speak highly of their schools and attribute their high standing largely to Professor Sturgill.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

Sales of Stock Ordered Stopped.

SALEM, Or., Aug. 27.—(Special).—Corporation Commissioner Watson today notified the Photo-Zinograph Company, of Portland, that it would not be allowed to sell stock until it had obtained a permit. The company asserts that Attorney-General Crawford in an opinion had decided that it would not be a violation of the law for it to sell stock. Mr. Watson holds that the opinion of the Attorney-General was unenforceable, and even if official he would not abide by it, for he is of the opinion that the company is not legally qualified to sell stock.
