

ANNOUNCING IMPORTANT SALE OF NEW SUITS

Between Ourselves

—Ever and anon we find our knowledge of the King's English sorely tried in the effort to encompass all that is new in the world. We are grateful when some kindly circumstance provides a name for any of the inventions which surprise us at every turn. Now, those dainty little bits of lace and chiffon, blossom trimmed, and with satin ribbon for shoulder straps—we were loath to call them "corset covers," and, presto, a name is provided. They are "camisoles"—from the French, of course. They are the inseparable companions of the transparent blouse. One hesitates to say whether the camisoles exist because of the transparency of the blouse, or is it that the blouses become transparent because of the loveliness of the alluring camisole?

—Boudoir caps become more engaging every day. Their variety is as infinite as that of the more venturesome hat. All that is required of the bonnet d'intérieur is that it be filmy, dainty, and light as air. It may look like an inverted flower, with petals of tinted ribbon and a lining of exquisite lace. It may emphasize its very lightness by a big bow of satin. It may be coquettish or demure, scant or voluminous, as milady wishes, but be that as you please, it is always a thing of bewildering loveliness. *And now-a-days—who has ever seen a curl-paper?

—The tea table has been too long a household tradition to be entirely supplanted by the afternoon bridge or luncheon of large and formal character. Little tea tables with printed porcelain tops and tea-sets to match have the quaintest air of intimacy. A very striking black and white set was decorated with a broad border of perpendicular stripes. The same bold design decorated the porcelain table-top. An English fancy, they say. China Dept., Sixth Floor.

—Do you believe in fairies?—No? Well, you will if you visit our art floor. You may not see the fairies, but you will go away confident that only fairy fingers could have fashioned and tinted this magnificent array of lamps. Shades of every description from little inverted flowers that gently diffuse the light from one small globe beneath, to immense piano lamps that are higher than your head and carry the most exquisite hand-made lace shades over dainty silks. Colors and lighting effects that are impossible to describe in any way except that some magic made them, and the fairies gave birth to the ideas at least. Sixth Floor.

—You know how hard it is to serve asparagus daintily with the ordinary dinner service. Here are the most charming asparagus sets that will solve the problem, consisting of a large platter with drainer, sauceboat and 12 individual plates to match. They are of heavy glazed wear in a creamy finish, and decorated with asparagus stalks and ferns. Sixth Floor.

—Doesn't a pretty umbrella stand that can easily be washed inside and out with soap and water sound good to you these rainy days? Here are some pure white porcelain, with delft blue decorations in new designs and shapes. Some are oval, some square. Sixth Floor.

The Joy of Being comfortable, yet attractively shod while in the house is no longer a problem, for the daintiest, and really serviceable, slippers are all ready awaiting your approval. Of soft satin and velvet; of suede and soft kid. Cosily lined with a soft satin quilting, and ornamented with a fluffy pon pon. And they come in shades that will match the color of your kimono, such as pinks, blues, lavenders, as well as black, and the linings are all of some bright contrasting harmonious tint. They have a medium heel, with lightweight soles, giving them the appearance and grace of an evening slipper, yet possessing all the comforts of a sandal. Prices $2.00 and $2.50. Basement.

The New "Royal Sultana" Veil

—The very latest fad in face veils, which has taken its inspiration from the fashions of the Far East as recently launched by Paul Poiret. It presents a dainty crescent-shaped panel of plain net, which insures a clear field of vision, and the body of the veiling involves a clever treatment of the beautiful "Leaf of the Lily" motif, thus producing the same fascinating and alluring effects as acquired by the beauties of the harem.—Price $1.75 each. First Floor.

German Silver Picture Frames

In Three Sizes—Away Under Regular Prices

Special 25c, 50c and $1.00 Each

—While these frames are of German silver they are so well finished and so perfectly made that it is difficult to detect them from the Sterling silver and are guaranteed not to tarnish. They come in three different sizes, oval in shape, and mounted on ball feet, having colored velvet backs. The illustration shows these different sizes. It is not long before Christmas and you might profit by this sale to secure your holiday frame needs now. First Floor.

A Recent Item From a French Fashion Paper Says:

—All the world goes to Paris for lines and colors of Fashion, but strange as it may seem, Paris is no longer the world's corset-capital.

—"Mlle. la Parisienne, and her rival beauties of Brussels, Biarritz and Ostend, now prefer the Smart Set, because it is more stylish, shapely, durable and comfortable than any Parisian corset."

—The smartly dressed women in London have long been wearing Smart Set corsets. In America, the Smart Set has a very select circle. We are the exclusive Portland agents for this corset that is attracting world-wide attention, and show a wide range of models. The New Smart Set models will meet the full approval of our most exacting patrons.
