

VANCOUVER URGES GRAND JURY PROBE

Mayor's Attempt to Have Ballot "Scandal" Taken Up by Council Fails.

QUORUM IS IN PORTLAND

Citizens in Mass Meeting Protest Against Muddle Resulting From Tie Vote in 6th Ward—Attorney Suggests Remedial Step.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Nov. 26.—(Special.)—Never before in the history of this city, and that reaches back almost a century, has there been such a scandal concerning an election, in which George R. Stoner and Edward H. Mackey are tied, by the canvass of the returns, for candidate for Councilman from the Sixth Ward, east of the gorge.

Mayor Irwin attempted to hold a special meeting of the Council yesterday, but only three members were present, three others having fled to Portland. The other was in Roseburg, Or. Another meeting was called for 9 o'clock this morning at the middle of the ballots for Mackey and Stoner, and had John Seerist, Chief of Police, serve the notices on the Councilmen. Wentworth, Stoner and Wilkinson were in Portland and when they stepped from the ferry at a late hour last night they were served.

Stickers to Be Used. The opinion of R. C. Sugg, City Attorney, will be followed, and the names of Stoner and Mackey will be left from the ballot for the regulation election Tuesday, December 2. Stickers will be used.

The terms of Stoner and Wilkinson will expire at the end of the year but Mr. Wentworth holds over a year. There were many rumors afloat today that Mr. Wentworth would be recalled for the action in attempting to block the holding of a meeting.

Mayor Irwin today said he was in favor of a grand jury, and several taxpayers made suggestions in which the question was raised, "Who is interested enough in the election to tamper with the poll books?"

W. P. Connors, cashier of the Vancouver National Bank, and father of Miss Lillian Connors, who was election clerk in precinct C, where the poll books was changed, was the one who offered when he said that something had been done reflecting on some of the best citizens of the city, and that, if the Councilmen who were absent were innocent, why were they not present to attend to business?

COW HOLDS UP TRAFFIC

Wanderer on Vancouver Trestle Goes Through and Help Is Needed.

"Come on, boys; give us a lift. There's a cow on the track," a shrill cry was heard from the trestle which carried passengers on a Vancouver car bound for Portland, when they reached the trestle south of Hayden's Island last night. Some of the men got off. They joined the motorman and conductor and walked about 20 feet ahead. There their observations confirmed the first informal announcement of the conductor. A much-frighened brindle cow, weighing about 800 pounds, was fast in the middle of the track, her four legs protruding through the rails. How she had made her way over about 150 feet of trestle without falling through is an unsolved mystery.

CO-OPERATION IS URGED

NO PROBE IS ORDERED

Mayor Albee Denies Health Office Report in Journal.

Contrary to a story printed in the Journal last night, the effect that Mayor Albee has started an investigation of the city health department to ascertain facts regarding the failure of health officials to prosecute the Le Grande Creamery Company for shipping away a number of crates of cold storage ducks condemned by market inspectors, Mayor Albee says no such investigation has been started. He says he has seen no occasion for an investigation. According to City Health Officer Marcellus a market inspector found a large quantity of frozen turkeys and ducks in the Le Grande creamery plant and condemned them. Later another inspector went to the place and said the ducks found were not in bad condition, but that the turkeys were bad and should be destroyed. After this the ducks were shipped to Seattle. When Dr. Marcellus heard that they had been shipped he says he immediately swore to a complaint against the proprietor of the creamery company and intended to have him arrested.

After the warrant was issued the proprietor of the creamery called upon Dr. Marcellus and told him of the conflict in the orders of the market inspectors. Not having heard of this before, Dr. Marcellus says he stopped service of the warrant until he could investigate. The ducks were returned to the city and destroyed and Dr. Marcellus says that because the department was to blame for the conflict in opinion and orders, he did not feel justified in prosecuting the management of the creamery, inasmuch as all the ducks were returned and condemned.

MANY FAR FROM HOME

Hotel Fare Will Be Chosen by Some, While Others, Like Ordinary and Fortunate Folk, Will Dine in Private Homes.

BY LEONE CARR BAER.

The actor's life may or may not be a paradise, but at least it has its pleasant spots. Thanksgiving passed away from home is maybe a calamity, but the actors in Portland have a lot to be thankful for. They might have had to pass the day en route somewhere—on a long jump between bookings.

Of the "Within the Law" company Miss Illington and her husband Edward J. Bowes, who accompanies her on her tour, will be guests of Calvin Hellig at his apartments. John (Jack) MacMahon, who is advance man for the company, is to be a guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Thompson on Lawson avenue, Portland Heights. Mr. and Mrs. William T. Pangle and a dozen others will gather at the Thompson home.

Home life as other people understand it is almost foreign to the average actor. Those nearly approaching it are the stock people, but even with them it is at best a sort of temporary abiding place, for they never know where they will be here or thousands of miles away within the month.

Edna Aug, former star of "The Oregonian" and "The Oregonian" of the current show, will be hostess at the Multnomah Hotel with Leo Beers, the society entertainer, and the little playlets at the Empress.

Most fitting of all the celebrations is that to be held by the company presenting "Louis Ruyter" for both the five players are to have an elaborate dinner at the Cornucopia much akin to the spread that is portrayed in their little playlets at the Empress.

Thanksgiving at Pantages will be a unique experience for little Olga Kaminsky, daughter of the Russian virtuoso, Alexander Kaminsky, for both she and her father will enjoy their first turkey and "celebrate their first Thanksgiving."

There's going to be a feast out at the home of Manager Johnson with the family and some guests. At the Lyric Bldg. today is to be held a dinner. Dr. and Mrs. Daniel Flood will be hosts at a party which will include Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Neuberger.
