Steamers Kilburn and Breakwater Doing Good Business Between Here and San Francisco, on

To make a general survey of the To make a general survey of the property and route and arrange for the operation of another steamer in the service is the announced purpose of a visit here by Andy Mahony, interested with Tom Crowley, of San Francisco, in the Emerald line, and Harry Struthers, of the firm of Struthers & Dixon, who are general agents for the San Francisco advices have it that they will embark there Saturday on the steamer F. A. Kilburn for Portland, pers at Eureka and Marshfield on the way. It was reported Monday that the steamer Geo. W. Elder, which was pur-chased with the Kilburn and Breakwater from the North Pacific Steamship Company, would be returned to the Portland-San Francisco service, but she is in the southern trade out of the Golden Gate, and the later information is that the line is dickering for another vessel for the northern route.

In the hubbub of negotiations on the part of the Pacific Steamship Company

o acquire the turbiners Northern Paoffic and Great Northern, also the steamers Beaver and Rose City, the Emeraid line did not figure as one of the connections from Portland, vet the Breakwater and Kilburn have been steadily on the run, and have not been getting full cargoes from here, either. Since the Mahony & Crowley control became a reality, the steamers have been operated on a dependable sched-ule, and the last trip of the Breakwater from San Francisco is said to have been with the largest passenger list she has carried from that city since her operation on the present schedule. In making the outside ports, the steamers often refill space emptied with partial shipments, and in that way revenues are larger than if only shipments were handled from each end of the run. The Chamber of Commerce, which has issued a circular to shippers, calling on them to support lines running from Portland, has determined Official Inspection Made as Such Because Engines Are Not Installed.

Though built as a crack motorship, patterned after the steam-schooner type, the Frank D. Stout is to suffer the ignominy of being classed for a time as an ocean-going barge, and she will be officially inspected today at Marshfield as such under direction of United States Inspectors of Steam Vessels Edwards and Wynn. She belongs to the California & Oregon Lumber Company, at Brookings, Cal., and is to carry material from there to the Golden Gate when her engines are ready. Meanwhile she will be used between Coos Bay and San Francisco, being

CASCADE LOCKS TO REOPEN

Gatzert Shoots Rapids With Passengers When Canal Is Found Closed.

Closing of the Cascade Locks by the freshet prevented the steamer Balley Gatzert from making her usual trip from here to The Dalles last night, but leave on schedule tonight, as the river was reported falling at The Dalles yesterday, and that was on to permit the locks to be operated

On the down trip Tuesday Captain On the down trip Tuesday Captain Archie Geer treated 125 passengers to a thrill when he navigated the steamer through the Cascades of the Columbia, the locks being closed so he could not take the usual route. The Gatzert was first to carry regular passengers through the rapids. The last vessel to make the run was the steamer D. S. Baker, June 26, 1883.

Smith, the new medical inspector for this district; Colonel B. C. Morse. Forty-fourth Infantry; General George A. White and William Reidt visited the camp today on an inspection tour.

It was no casual inspection of the men and the condition of the camp, for the officers visited each company quarters and afterwards a parade and a review of the troops in camp was held. Colonel Smith had a chance to get an expectation of the camp, for the discharge be carefully investigated, but any soldier who has received his discharge and is still within the age limit of the conscription must register and get his little green card. Now rumor has it that the War Department is contemplating putting an end to discharges for dependency.
