Where in the preceding trial of Casey for the murder a jury had disagreed, it was reported that the first ballot of the present jury, taken about half an hour after leaving the court-room at 4:10 Tuesday afternoon, was unanimous as to Casey's guilt. Succeeding ballots wavered only on the question of punishment, for under the present capital punishment law a jury may recommend life imprisonment as may recommend life imprisonment as an alternative to hanging. The jurors reported at 10 o'clock yesterday morning without recommendation, which is equivalent to a death sentence. Formal sentence will be pased by Judge Kavanaugh Saturday morning.

That sympathy, which played no part in the Casey defense, will be added to the ailibi for Burns was indicated by the appearance of Mrs. Burns and year-old baby in the courtroom at her husband's side during the opening hours of the case. Burns, though not presenting a defiant air, as though daring the jury to do its worst, as did Casey, is in a serious situation. For Casey, whose filmsy alibi carried no weight with a recent jury, based that alibi on his association with Burns the night of the killing and testimony supporting the alibi put Casey and Burns together at that time. The defense is faced with the problem of establishing an alibi for Burns which leaves Casey out of the situation, or else run counter to some of the defense testimony in the Casey trial.
