The Home in Good Taste

Framing Pictures.

GENERALLY speaking, there are two differing classes of frames—the wide and heavy ones, naturally appropriate to the solid medium of oil, and the lighter and slender moldings used for water colors, prints and the like.

The landscape or sea piece should have a simpler frame than the ornamental figure subject; oftentimes the simpler it is the better.

For old portraits nothing is so appropriate as the frames of their own times. Unless portraits of women are emphatically modern, in spirit we may use for them in the very beautiful Adam, Louis Quinze or Louis Seize designs. Men's portraits will be more appropriately framed in rather heavier and simpler moldings, of which the Whistler styles are among the best examples.

Paintings of strongly decorative character—such as the figure pieces of the great Frenchman (used primarily for panels), formal scenes and flower pieces with sculptured vases—partake largely of the nature of architectural decorations and should be treated accordingly.

Glass is usually not employed over oil paintings except where special protection is needed.

Answers to Friday's Questions.

Indention, meaning a blank space at the beginning or end of a line, is not used interchangeably with indentation, a dent.

Say "He doesn't know whether he can come" not "He don't know if he can come."

In front of is correct; in back of is a vulgarism.

Say "His camp is behind (not "in back of") the wood."

Household Problems

by Lillian Tingle

PORTLAND, Dec. 25.—Dear Miss Tingle: Will you kindly give me information as to the following: (1) A pork sausage for canning in pressure cooker. (2) A kind of jelly salad made with ham and peppers and, I think, some celery or cabbage. (3) How to prevent orange marmalade from losing its color. (4) How to make a "twelfth night" cake? Thanking you in advance.

Things You'll Love to Make

Children love animal coat hangers.

THE kiddies will love to put away their wraps if they have animal coat hangers on which to hang them. Cover small hangers with some furry material like that of which teddy bears are made. Cut it after the pattern indicated by the black diagram above. Half of one side is shown. You will need two full pieces. Place the two pieces over the hanger. Overcast or button-hole the edges together, leaving a small open space through which to put some cotton stuffing. Fill the head until it is well rounded. Pad the arms of the hanger fairly well. Tie a ribbon and bell around the neck of the cat. Other animals can be worked out in the same way.

JUDGE GATENS MOVING

CIRCUIT COURT PLANS TO HONOR SUCCESSOR.

Reception to Be Held for Louis P. Hewitt Tuesday, Starting at 9:15 A. M.

Plans were completed yesterday by the judges and attaches of the circuit court for an official reception to be extended to Louis P. Hewitt, who becomes judge in department No. 5 and presiding judge the first of the year. The reception will be held Tuesday, January 2, starting at 9:15 A. M., in the courtroom of Presiding Judge Stapleton. Judge-elect Hewitt will occupy the bench with Judge Stapleton and will jointly attend to assignment of cases and other routine after the ceremonies. His first duties as presiding judge, directed from his own room, will be those of instructing the new grand jury. C. M. Idelman, whose rooms Mr. Hewitt has been sharing in his private practice and a close personal friend of the new judge, will be the speaker and will introduce him. After the response of the judge there will be brief greetings from his colleagues.

Judge-elect Hewitt has made known that he will retain the personnel of the presiding judge's court. L. A. Harlow will serve as calendar clerk, Joe Rogers as presiding clerk and George Dufur as court reporter.

In taking up the work of presiding judge during the first six months of his term on the bench, Mr. Hewitt faces a rather awesome amount of detail, but he hopes to familiarize himself with all his multifarious duties in a short time. Judge Gatens, whom he succeeded, completed the moving of his books and legal equipment from the rooms of department No. 5 on the third floor yesterday so the judge-elect may move in today and become established for the beginning of his work.
