Mrs. J. Wesley Ladd gave a charming "rainbow luncheon" on Tuesday afternoon. Luncheon was served at six-round tables, each one having a separate color scheme in its floral arrangement. At Mrs. Ladd's table, the flowers were yellow tulips, while the other tables were variously decorated in green, red, white and pink. Mrs. Helen Ladd-Corbett acted as hostess at a table daintily decorated with mignonette; at Miss Mead's table were pink sweet peas; Miss Shepherd's table was gay with vivid red tulips; Miss May Falling's had white narcissus, and Mrs. Walter Burrell's lilles of the valley. Dainty hand-painted name cards were at the plate of each guest, tied with ribbons in the shade of the table decoration. One of the most delightful afternoon entertainments which Portland society has enjoyed for a long time was Mrs. J. P.

Batchelder's tea, on Thursday afternoon, from 3 to 5. The floral decorations were most lovely; in the parior, where the furnishings are in soft tones of green, quantities of starry white degreed was entirely and the consolation by Mrs. J. C. Mann. Those presonantly of the consolation by Mrs. J. quantities of starry white dogwood were used, while in the red hall the brilliant yellow of the Scotch broom made a most effective combination of vivid color. Mrs. Batchelder received her guests in the parlor, and with her were Mrs. Lombardi, Mrs. Ames, Miss Agnes Catlin, and Mrs. I. P. Robinson. Mrs. Wallace McCamant. and Mrs. Wilbur poured tea, and Mrs. Dickson and Miss Frances Chamberlain served ices, assisted by Miss Laura Jor-

Pretty girls, sparkling music and ex-quisite decorations marked the last dance this season of the series arranged by the Junior Eachelors, given Friday evening at Parsons Hall. The orchestra was almost concealed behind natural trees, and dreamy waitses floated through the floral screen like rare music from an aeoltan harp in a gurden. The weather was oppressively warm, but the dances were de-liciously short, and the Summer gowns of the girls made a cool, restful picture. What appeared to be a real star twinkled in the ceiling over the dancers. It was really an incandescent light that was trying to blaze, but could not, and it looked like a fairest evening star. The floor management was all that could be desired, and the comfort of the guests was well and the comfort of the guests was well looked after by these gentlemen: Peter McIntosh, Merton Wisdom, Fred W.
