

SESSION ENDS IN COMPLETE PEACE

Moore Remains the President of the Good Roads Association.

RICHARDSON SO REQUESTS

He Is Willing to Stay in the Organization as Secretary, and Harmony Takes the Place of Previous Discord.

EXPOSITION ATTENDANCE, 12,413.
Despite the inclement weather yesterday the Exposition attendance showed a good increase, the figures being 12,413. Today's features at the fair grounds will be Sunday services at 4 o'clock and Jones' Band in the "Lohengrin" programme at 8 o'clock in the Auditorium.

White doves of peace settled down on the Good Roads Convention yesterday afternoon, when Colonel H. W. Richardson withdrew his name from the presidential contest and allowed the affairs of the National association to repose under the guidance of President W. H. Moore, of St. Louis. A brand-new constitution was drawn up and adopted by the delegates, and an election will not be held until next November.

Through the action of Colonel Richardson, the bitter contest that has occupied the attention of the convention for the past two days, the existence of which has precluded the consideration of a large amount of important discussion and debate, was brought to an end. President Moore has come out the victor in the struggle, but his success would not have been attained by the withdrawal of Colonel Richardson.

Since the opening of the convention it had been the desire of the Richardson element to force an election on the delegates of this faction being of the opinion that they could secure the election of the present secretary to the presidency. It was also whispered that James W. Abbott, of the Public Road Department of the Government, would then be put into Mr. Richardson's old place.

Action of Moore Faction.

The Moore faction, feeling that it would be easy for Colonel Richardson to secure his election in the West, which is not considered to be Moore country, opposed the election at every turn. Finally the disagreement became so bitter that it almost resulted in an open fight on Friday afternoon, and did bring about the alleged election of Secretary Richardson to the presidency. The absurdity of an association with two heads appeared in the winter crises in the convention, and it was decided since the constitution of the association was so manifestly weak, that both the presidential aspirants withdraw from the time being and allow Judge John H. Scott, of Salem, to take the chair and prepare for the framing of a new organic law. Thus matters stood at the close of business Friday afternoon.

Friday night a committee of delegates from a score of states labored over the new constitution, and after hours of work produced a document that found favor in the eyes of the public. In the morning the constitution provided for an election of officers at a regular annual meeting to be held in St. Louis on the third Wednesday of November of each year. The new constitution was recognized by the opposition to the old document in nearly every respect, and made the organization of the association a thousand times more close, allowing, as it did, representation of every state in election, so that no part of the country could force the selection of a sectional candidate by reason of a large number of delegates present at a convention.

Resolution is Submitted.

In connection with the resolution recommending the adoption of the new constitution, the following was also submitted by the committee:
"It was unanimously resolved that it was the sense of the committee that for the good of the cause it was advisable that both Colonel W. H. Moore and Colonel H. W. Richardson should resign any and all claims to the office of president, and that no election should be held, and the duties of this office should be discharged by the vice-president-at-large until the general election of officers, as provided by the amended constitution.
"It was also unanimously resolved that our honored officers, W. H. Moore and H. W. Richardson, be reinstated as members ex-officio of the executive committee of the Good Roads Association."
It was the purpose of the committee, then to place the reins of power in the hands of Judge A. E. Mann, of Florida, until the election to be held in November. With these results in view, the committee submitted the document to the convention.

In the meantime, Oregon and Washington delegates, believing that they could serve the states they represented by securing the election of a local man as president of the association, determined to enter Bateman Hill, of Seattle, in the race, and if possible elect him.

The New Constitution.

The new constitution did not come up for consideration in the morning session, which was for the Good Roads day exercises only. These exercises were held in the Auditorium, and addresses were delivered by Robert Livingston, Jefferson Myers and Dr. Denton. Rev. A. A. Morrison delivered the invocation, and the Administration Band furnished the music.
J. H. Albert read a paper at the opening of the afternoon session. President Moore and other members of the dark clouds of war appeared on the horizon when the constitution came up for discussion.
Section by section it was brought before the delegates, and with the addition of several minor changes its friends forced its adoption, despite the opposition of certain members of the house. At length, when discussion of the clause on "Elections" was at its hottest, Secretary Richardson took the floor, and in low but firm tones told the delegates that he was willing that the resolution vesting power in the officers should be defeated, so that the present officers would remain in power until November without controversy.

They Applaud Richardson.

It took a couple of seconds for the delegates to get the full meaning of Colonel Richardson's remarks, and then with one accord they leaped to their feet and applauded until the rafters rang. President Moore smiled appreciatively, and Colonel Richardson looked like a man who had a clear conscience and an untroubled heart.
With the two days' bitter contest at an end, it was an easy matter to adopt the new constitution and transact a few other items of business that remained, including the referring of the place for the next convention to the executive committee. Votes of thanks were tendered to Portland, the Lewis and Clark Exposition officials and the officials of the convention, and then with cheers and applause the fifth annual convention of the National Good Roads Association came to an end with words of peace on every tongue.

FIREWORKS ON MOUNT HOOD.

Exposition Plans Pyrotechnic Display for Night of Fourth.

Mount Hood is to erupt on the evening of July 4. It will not be exactly the same sort of a performance as Mount Pelee gave some time since, but will be one of the most spectacular events ever witnessed. The Exposition management is now making arrangements for the affair, as the eruption will be part of the Exposition's Independence day programme. The effect of an eruption will be produced by several hundred pounds of red powder and fireworks, which have already been ordered. Farmers living near Mount Hood will be hired to pack the explosive to be held during the day, including a parade inside the grounds. At night, following the Mount Hood eruption, there will be fireworks at the Exposition on a more elaborate scale than ever before presented in Portland. There will also be a big water pageant in which launches, gondolas and water illuminations will figure conspicuously.

Other plans are being outlined with the idea of making the glorious Fourth one of the biggest days of the Exposition, and one which will take the record in the matter of attendance. Special exercises are to be held during the day, including a parade inside the grounds. At night, following the Mount Hood eruption, there will be fireworks at the Exposition on a more elaborate scale than ever before presented in Portland. There will also be a big water pageant in which launches, gondolas and water illuminations will figure conspicuously.

Since the Fourth is the big event of the year in juvenile circles, it has been decided to make no charge of admission for children. Boys and girls accompanied by adults will be allowed to pass through the gates if there were no gates there. Other plans are to be announced at a later date.

RECEPTION TO OFFICERS.

Banquet Given in Honor of Rear-Admiral Goddich.

The reception given at the American Inn last night by President Goode, of the Lewis and Clark Exposition, in honor of Rear-Admiral Goddich and the officers of the Pacific Squadron, was a brilliant affair in every particular, and highly enjoyed by those present. Two thousand invitations had been issued, and it is estimated that fully 1200 were in attendance. The immense reception and dining-rooms of the American Inn were resplendent in gorgeous attire, a profusion of floral decorations adding greatly to the charm of the situation, while the National colors were also a feature.

Some elegant costumes were observed upon the floor of the commodious dancing hall, and local society turned out en masse in honor of the occasion. At 8 o'clock a sumptuous repast was served, there being accommodation for 1000 guests in the dining-room, and it was taxed to its fullest capacity. The reception line was in the following order: Theodore Hardee, President, H. W. Goode, Admiral C. H. Goddich, commanding Pacific Squadron; Mrs. Goode, Captain E. K. Moore, of cruiser Chicago; Mrs. Alfred Ladd Corbett, Mrs. E. C. Alsworth, J. C. Alsworth, Commander K. Niles, of the cruiser Boston; Mrs. L. Allen Lewis, Mr. Lewis, Lieutenant Scholfield, of the torpedo-boat destroyer Perry; Mrs. Dr. Mackenzie, Dr. K. A. J. Mackenzie, Lieutenant L. R. Sargent, flag officer of the Chicago; Mrs. S. M. Mears, Mr. Mears, Ensign Goddich, of the Chicago; Henry Lund Corbett. The festivities incident to the reception terminated at midnight.

BOAT-LANDING FOR FAIR

Passenger Craft Will Begin to Fly Between Portland Docks and the New Water Entrance to the Exposition.

Clearing away the unsightly riverbank habitations in the vicinity of the Exposition grounds in order to make place for a river entrance, has been marked by bitter strife during the past week, and while the work of clearance should, ordinarily, have taken up only a day or two, it was not completed until yesterday after an arduous week.

The inhabitants of these crude shacks and old barges contested the right of the Exposition in taking their roofs from over their heads, as they expressed by bitter strife during the past week, and while the work of clearance should, ordinarily, have taken up only a day or two, it was not completed until yesterday after an arduous week.

Local boatmen are arranging to run a line of boats to the Exposition grounds from various boat landings in the city, and it is intended to make the river entrance to the fair popular during the summer.

During the recent international yacht race, in which the American yacht was victorious, the hours of the exciting trans-Atlantic voyage were beguiled with music of the Pianola Piano. Both the winning yacht Atlantic and the Valhalla, which finished third, had these instruments aboard.

The number of palatial and celebrated yachts upon which Pianolas and Pianola Pianos are to be found is simply amazing. There is a very handsome Pianola Piano upon the Delaware, the flagship of the New York Yacht Club; also the Alleen, owned by Edwin Gould; the Rainbow, of Cornelius Vanderbilt; Frederick W.
