

KERRIGAN'S OF GREEK GAMES

Canadian Wins Marathon Race to Discomfiture of Hellenes.

IRISH FLAG UNRECOGNIZED

British Colors Go Up When Hibernian Wins Instead of the Harp and Sunbeam on the Field of Green.

BY H. W. KERRIGAN. ATHENS, June 9.—(Special Correspondence)—Goudier, the Frenchman, who won the pole-vault at 11 feet 9 inches, was one of the surprises of the first field event at Athens. His style of vaulting was altogether different from the American style. He holds the bar with both hands together at the pull and clears the bar with his hands in the same position and a doubled-up swing of the body. The Swedish contestant, Soderstrom, had more of the American style and was very deliberate in his vaulting. Glover, who won third place, seemed to be out of form, due probably to overexercise the day before.

The discus standing throw was won by a Finlander, who made a throw of 115 feet 4 inches, beating Georgandis, the Greek, who was considered the best in the field in this contest. Sheridan, who really threw the discus further than any of the other contestants, was barred for the alleged reason that he did not have the right form, the ancient style of stooping. He did not compete any further.

Tosia Wins Big Lift. In the two-hands bar bell lifting, Tosia, a Greek soldier, was the winner with 345 pounds. Steinbach, of Austria, was second. The Greek, who is only 21 years old, has an arm of about 8 inches from the elbow, but his main strength seems to be in his chest and shoulders. A keen rivalry was shown between the Austrian and the Greek, Steinbach asserting that Tosia did not lift the weights properly. In the one-hand lifting, Sheridan won an easy winner. Camilotti, an Italian, was second and Schneiderli, a German, third.

An interesting event which stirred the immense audience to a high pitch was the stone-throwing. Georgandis and Sheridan were the contestants, and as the Greek would not throw the stone, he threw the immense crowd would go wild with excitement, rewarding Sheridan with only a fair applause when the latter would throw further than the American. The event was very popular with the masses. Finally, when the Greek won, the crowd gave full vent to their enthusiasm, and the vast amphitheater was a scene of intense excitement and joy. Sheridan was second, with another Greek winning the third place. Mitchell, of the American team, could have easily won this event had he not been injured.

German Take Tug-of-War. Another event which was exciting and drew thousands of cheers from the vast audience was the tug-of-war. In the first two pulls the Greeks pulled Sweden and Germany out of their respective positions, and simply went wild with enthusiasm. But when in the final Germany came out first, Greece showed with Sweden holding the third place, and the American team, the winners' reward from the long rows of seats filled the minute before with enthusiastic cheering and themselves hoarse in honor of the Greek team.

Sweden won all the places in the lance-throwing, showing their great superiority in that sport. Sheridan won the shot-putting contest with a slight margin of 2 inches to his credit. Hungary getting the second place and Sweden third.

Bonhay Wins Mile Walk. An unexpected surprise to the Americans was the mile walk, won by Bonhay, who never expected to win the event. It was a funny sight to see the different contestants walking in a very serious mood around the long track. Prince George was going most of the judging and he continued to be very strict in some of the competitors first ruled out by the judge of the contest, who knew little or nothing about the event. It was a farce all the way through, and really proved a gift to the American team. Bonhay, who won it, had never walked in his life before, and only went in for a joke. He intended to drop out after one or two laps. Donald, of Canada, won the second place, and he really was the only fair walker in the large number of contestants.

Emory Wins High Jump. Roy Emory tried his best to beat his standing high jump record of 5 feet 3 inches, but like all the other American athletes, could not even approach his former record. It is hard to decide whether the climate affected the Americans or whether the team was simply not in good condition. The men as a rule would feel all right, but when it came to the test not one of them could come up to their best work. Emory was first in the jump, with Leon of Belgium, Sheridan and Robinson, of America, next. Emory would be the high step and jump, with another of his countrymen getting the second place. Crowninshield, a young American, was not a member of the team, but was not his own responsibility, won the third place. Several amusing incidents occurred during the contest when Emory, after winning the several events, would rush out with an Irish flag and beg Prince George to permit the flag to be hoisted with the other flags on the high pole as a signal of the winner. But the Prince would only shake his head and politely refuse, saying he was very sorry. The scene had a touch of pathos and humor, as the Irishman begged the Prince "for just this once," only getting a polite refusal.

Wants Irish Flag. The reason for O'Connor's action is attributed to the fact that every time an Irishman would win the flag-pole, great him from the top of the flag-pole, and the Irish team came separately from the English team, even paying its own fare. At first, the Irish would not participate, as they insisted that the representatives of Ireland, and not Great Britain, they had the people's sympathy on their side, and every time the Irish flag would be hoisted, the crowd would loudly cheered. He also went in for the high jump. The Irishman holds a record of 4 feet 3 inches, but at the contest the best he could do was 5 feet 7 inches. He is about 6 feet 3 inches tall and very thin, with no muscular development whatever. How he ever jumped 24 feet 11 inches in the broad jump was very surprising.

Great Marathon Race. The star event of the games, however, was the great Marathon race, run on the last day. Not an empty seat was to be seen, and the great amphitheater around the stadium was packed to its utmost. Fully 20,000 people were there to view the crowning event of the international contest, truly a feast in honor of Zeus, the

ANGELS ARE LOSERS

Beavers Take the Game in Eleventh Inning. SCORE STANDS TWO TO ONE

One of the Best and Closely-Contested Games of the Season Played on the Local Diamond.

Portland 2, Los Angeles 1.

Talk about hot games. Yesterday's ball game was the hottest and most closely contested game of the season. The afternoon started out beautifully, but when ball time came the skies looked threatening, and the great disappointment of the great crowd, which came to witness the play, the sun, however, showed itself several times, and luckily, the expected rain did not come.

The game started according to schedule, and the first inning did not bring any results. Mitchell's fine play got Portland two hits in the first. The second inning nearly gave Los Angeles two runs. Dillon was third with Deimas on second, both coming home at the same time. Dillon, who was first to cross the home plate, was ruled out by Umpire Knell, amidst the loud and angry protests of the Angels.

Several interesting dialogues took place in the audience while the wrangle was going on. The patriotism of the Portland fans was shown on both sides. The need for long-range shooting may be engaged in. The local range will not admit of long-distance work, while opposite Salem shooting at 100 yards may be conducted safely. Squads of twelve men will go to the range weekly until the season's work is completed. Sharpshooters and marksmen in the Guard are looking forward to some big scores if not a few broken records.
