A voca-tional educational system would not only assist a boy or girl in choosing a life work, but would help them to prepare for it. If such an education were obliga-tory there would soon be no demand for for the rew, but what are we to do for the many, those whose time for school-ing is limited, because they must early in life take their allotted place in the ronks of an agricultural, commercial or indus-trial pursuit? This is one of the most unskilled labor, and the parent would be obliged to keep the child in school until a degree of proficiency in a vocation had been attained.
