Socks and a Windy Day.

"What in the world would a woman do on a real windy day?" she asked. Speaking of corsets, Mrs Channon declared that few women wore them who did not need them, but said they were necessities for some. The consensus of opinion among Chicago women is that corsets should not be worn, union suits always, and tight dresses, high heels and small shoes never. But on the socks question there is a division.

Mrs. Charles Percy McAllister, of Ashland boulevard, a prominent West Side club woman, does not believe the idea of wearing short stockings a bad one, but she balks at calling them socks.

The Name Is Offensive,

"The word don't sound just right in connection with a woman," she said. "It might also be a little embarrassing on a windy day."

Speaking of the other reforms, Mrs. Mc-Allister said: "I believe the majority of woman wear clothes that fit too tightly and cramp their bodies. Everyone knows union suits are more hygienic than the two-place suits. They take the weight the hips where weight of clothing should not come."

Fine for Hot Weather.

A South Side woman declared that lots of women wore socks in hot weather.

Miss Eola La Follette, daughter of Senator La Follette, who is here with a theatrical company, said her mother never allowed her to wear a corset, as they are a detriment to good health. Women of good figure don't need them, she dewinred.
