UNCLE SAM'S ARM IS LONG

ITALIAN UNLAWFULLY IN COUNTRY LEARNS FACT.

Arrested After Putting Contention Between Himself and Federal Authorities in Pennsylvania.

Giovanni Gallico, an Italian about 35 years old, was arrested yesterday by Immigration Inspectors Hussey and Sawyer and lodged in the County Jail, charged with being in the country unlawfully. Gallico was caught at a grading camp on the line of the Salem Electric Railroad, a few miles south of Tualatin. It is said that he left Italy about 15 months ago and came into this country through Philadelphia. He presented forged citizenship papers to gain admission and had been in the city but a few days when the fact was discovered. He was immediately arrested. Gallico was charged in the Criminal Court with presenting forged papers, convicted and sentenced to a year in the State penitentiary. When this sentence was imposed, the state authorities were asked to let the Federal officials know when the man was to be released, in order that he could be deported. Gallico served the year, but the prison authorities neglected to notify the Immigration officers of his release, and he went free. As soon as it was heard that Gallico was at liberty, the Federal authorities began search for him. Word was received that Gallico had a brother in Portland, and the authorities traced him here. The warrant for his arrest was forwarded to the local immigration office. Inspectors Hussey and Sawyer took up the search and worked for three weeks without any success. Finally they were informed that Gallico was working in a grading camp for the Salem road. They hired a buggy yesterday afternoon, and went out to the camp. There they found their man, and placed him under arrest. Gallico will be brought up before a board of special inquiry Monday, and will be allowed to show cause why he should not be deported. It is said that the man is afflicted with trachoma, which, being a contagious disease, is sufficient cause for deportation. Gallico will be examined by a surgeon of the Marine Hospital, and if it is found that he is suffering from the disease, he will be sent back to Italy.

Killed in Auto Smashup.
BELLINGHAM, July 13.—J. J. Larson, liveryman and garage owner of this city, was crushed to death in an automobile smash last night a few miles south of here. He attempted to turn the machine in a narrow road and backed over a 40-foot embankment. Glenn Hyatt, capitalist, and D. E. Biggs, a local physician, who accompanied Larson, were not seriously injured.

CIVIL SERVICE EMPLOYEES

A Plea for Pension Allowances for Them in Old Age.

PORTLAND, July 13.—(To the Editor.)—With reference to the article appearing in Friday's Oregonian over the signature of Thomas Paulsen, the writer feels it his duty to take up the cudgel in defense of the Civil Service employes who have spent the best years of their lives in Government service and are now, by reason of age, or infirmities, incapacitated for further service. It appears to be the impression of those who are not "on the inside" that the life of a Government employe is a sinecure from all points of view; that his or her hours of daily duty are so few as to be scarcely worthy of mention and are spent in discussing the topics of the day, scheming to extort money from the coffers of the treasury, and, in short, in any way other than in fulfilling the duties for which compensation is received. This impression is entirely erroneous, and were it known, it would be found that, as a class, these employes are the mainstay of the particular branch of service to which they are attached, and receive but a bare pittance in compensation when their real worth is taken into consideration. To be sure there are exceptions; an occasional worthless employe finds his way into Government service through pressure brought to bear upon public officials, or by sundry other means, but his retention must needs be at the expense of those who are able, willing and competent to bear the burden of extra work involved. Could Mr. Paulsen take a journey through the various Government offices within the boundaries of the United States and in its foreign possessions, investigate the character of the work each employe is performing and see how the makers of history lean upon the nameless ones serving under their direction, he might possibly appreciate the fact that ability is a qualification not entirely foreign to the makeup of the Government employe. The question that asserts itself is this: What shall be done with the employe who has spent from 30 to 40 years in the service, has been buffeted about from place to place, come to climate, has absorbed his savings on account of the additional expense thrust upon him, and whose vitality at last fails to respond to the call of time? Shall he be rewarded with a pension sufficient to keep him in some degree of comfort, or shall we "tie a can" to him and turn him out to graze? The writer, who is a young man, by the way, and to whom retirement and pension offers no attractive features at the present time, has seen service in many places in the United States, has been chased and caught by "Yellow Jack" in Cuba, and has sidestepped cholera germs in plague-stricken spots in the provinces of the Philippine Islands, is in a good position to expatiate upon the real worth and loyalty to duty of Government employes. Some years ago the War Department issued orders to the effect that all its employes serving in the United States must perform a tour of duty in the Philippines in order to make room at home for those who had served there since the days of first occupation. An examination of candidates was directed in order to determine their physical fitness for tropical service. The writer, who at that time occupied a desk in one of the department's head offices at the other end of the line, had a good opportunity to study the veteran members selected as they came limping into Manila to report for duty. That they covered up their physical disabilities at the time of examination, no one could doubt, and that their services in Manila and provincial points in the islands were attended with constant suffering was apparent to all. Yet they were uncomplaining at all times and covered up their defects as best they could, looking forward anxiously to the time when their term of service would expire and they would be eligible for transfer to the homeland. In closing, the writer suggests that the settlement of the question at issue be left to those who are in a position to understand it—in brief, let the Government, through its officials, make the veteran representatives to Congress, and let Portland care for the members of the street-cleaning department in such a manner as its resident voters may dictate. A GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEE.

Yet we should think one would prefer not to take this service, but to enter and pursue some independent calling.

Will Try to Raise Andalema.
TACOMA, Wash., July 13.—(Special.)

—The steamer Elithu Thompson sailed tonight for Nome and St. Michael, with a cargo of fresh meats and miscellaneous goods valued at $90,000. The Thompson will call at Kaku Harbor on her return voyage, where the owners have a salmon cannery, to load part of the season's pack.

Judge W. Collins, of Tacoma, will make another attempt to raise the ship Andalema, which turned turtle one night about five years ago and is now lying at the bottom of the bay. Mr. Collins' plans are to force air-bags down a tube into the hold, inflate them and with the aid of gools, lift the vessel.

Centralia Water Is Pure.
CENTRALIA, Wash., July 13.—(Special.)—An examination of the city water by the health officer shows it to be pure. Some complaints had been made regarding the taste of the water, but this was shown to be from the new mains that have been recently laid. The health officer also made a thorough inspection of the water plant and found everything in a highly satisfactory condition.

Extra Steamer From Japan.
VICTORIA, B. C., July 13.—The steamer Tartar, which arrived today from Yokohama, brought news that, owing to the heavy demand for freight space for Seattle, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha had chartered the steamer Myoro Maru from the Japanese naval department, and the steamer left Kobe June 29 and was expected to leave Yokohama for Seattle about July 3. The government has received a request from the Russian government for the return of the Russian hospital ships Orel, Angara and Kascan, captured during the recent war. Japan has declined to return the vessels.

Will Hold Swimming Race.
Representatives of the various athletic organizations of Portland that have aquatic departments met at The Oaks last night and decided to hold a relay swimming match on August 3 in the Willamette River. The start will be from the home of the Oregon Yacht Club, and the contestants will swim to the opposite side of the river and return. A handsome silver cup is to be offered for the winning team. The organizations represented at the meeting were: Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club, East Side Athletic Club, Young Men's Christian Association, Oregon Yacht Club and The Oaks Swimming Club.

New Train Service.
The Canadian Pacific's new 8-hour service from Portland to St. Paul is faster than the fastest. Electric lighted trains. Electric ventilators. Library, buffet, compartment, observation cars. The most up-to-date train in the West.

Tornado Bodily Lifts Cow.
Kansas City Star. John Ashworth, a farmer near Guthrie, Okla., asserts that in a recent tornado, his cow was lifted into the air and carried a quarter of a mile.
