KAISER IS GIVEN THE STRAIGHT TIP

Danish Princess Thyra Tells Him She Will Not Marry His Son.

SPOILS HIS VACATION TRIP

Snubbed at Court and by People, Kaiser Finds Last Straw in Princess, Who Believes in Socialism and Equal Rights.

BERLIN, July 27.—(Special.)—The Kaiser has not had much pleasure out of his vacation trip this summer. When he went to Copenhagen he was received with cold politeness by the people, who thus expressed their opposition to the Kaiser's pet scheme for a match between his second son, Prince Adelbert, and Princess Thyra, of Denmark.

As if to show her own feelings toward the young prince, Princess Thyra, who is nothing if not sincere, refused to be one of the party which welcomed the imperial party and later on, while on the way to Frederiksberg Castle, some 15 miles north of Copenhagen, she greatly surprised the Kaiser by buttonholing him and telling him very plainly why she did not think the match would be a happy one.

The contents of this unique conversation have leaked out and it is being told here that the young Danish Princess informed the Kaiser that she could never be a good wife to a German Prince, brought up in the conservative air of the Prussian Court.

"I am four years older than your son, and our tastes are entirely different. I love literature and art and Prince Adelbert is fond only of outdoor sports and country life. He shares your conventional ideas about woman's sphere in life, and I am too advanced, inclined to believe in socialism and greatly interested in social work. I am furthermore a strong believer in woman's suffrage."

This confession was not without effect upon the Kaiser, who is said to have been moved and silent the remainder of the trip, and has probably thanked his lucky star that prevented him getting such a black sheep into his family.

MRS. FIELD, SPARTAN MOTHER Will Not Coddle Boy and Forms Contrast to Mrs. Drexel.

LONDON, July 27.—(Special.)—Mrs. Marshall Field was one of the American mothers who went down to the cricket match played between fathers and sons at Evelyn's School in Buckinghamshire, the fashionable preparatory school for Eton.

Mrs. Field is known as the "Spartan Mother." She does not believe in coddling or spoiling her son and the boy's allowance of pocket money is exactly the same as that of the poorest boy in the school. Young Field is a very manly, self-reliant boy, with absolutely no airs or graces, and he is by far the most popular boy in the school.

A striking contrast was the way in which Mrs. A. J. Drexel, of Philadelphia, managed her offspring. When little Drexel had a toothache, Mrs. Drexel whisked him away from the school. Later on the boy had a cold. Down came Mrs. Drexel again and whisked him off to the Sunny South. The other boys of course drew unfavorable comparisons and accused Drexel of suffering from a swelled head because he was so fond of talking about royalty.

Young Drexel has now been whisked away from Evelyn's for good. Mrs. Marshall Field has taken a very large and beautiful house in Hertfordshire on a long lease. It is an old house known as Danesbury and Mrs. Field is spending a very large sum in alterations.

EXPECTS AMERICA-JAPAN WAR

Prince Henry's Opinion Confirmed by Reports From Japan.

BERLIN, July 27.—(Special.)—Prince Henry of Prussia, who is a great admirer of Americans, believes that a great war between Yankees and Japs must come very soon, probably before the American squadron reaches the Pacific. Officially, of course, his lips are sealed, but privately he has discussed the matter quite freely.

The brother of the Kaiser thinks, as do many others with him, that Americans are too prone to believe in the smooth words of the Japanese, and German consular reports from Japan seem to prove that Japan is preparing to strike a blow before the Atlantic fleet reaches San Francisco.

A little more civilized at least on the surface, these are Mongolians, the Japanese have lost none of the old time cunning and are not to be trusted.

The general feeling here in Germany is that the war must come and it is feared, too, that America will come out second best, which would be a calamity to the whole white race.

MUCH MONEY IN GUN-RUNNING

Americans Sell Rifles to Moors and Savage Tribes.

LONDON, July 27.—(Special.)—Many adventurous Americans are engaged in the business of gun-running, perhaps the most profitable and the most risky of all industries. It has lately had a boom in Morocco, where a demand for modern rifles has arisen.

The north coast of Africa is one of the chief centers of the trade, the other important areas for gun-running being the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf. The last-named is the scene of the largest trade, as it is almost the only avenue of supply for Central Asia and the Indian frontier.

English Martini rifles are at a handsome profit for about $60 each. They are specially made with an Arabic inscription to distinguish their origin.

During the fighting in Somaliland, the natives fighting against the British troops received large consignments of rifles from England itself. These were first shipped

BEEF TRUST INVADERS FRANCE

Prepares to Erect Big Packing-Houses at Several Towns.

PARIS, July 27.—(Special.)—France is to have an American beef trust. This information comes from the Society of French Cattle Breeders, which is naturally opposed to such a scheme, but definite news is wanting.

According to a statement by Marcel Vacher, president of the Cattle Breeders' Society, land has been bought for building stockyards and packing-houses at Bonneuil on the Seine, near Paris; at Gravelle, near Havre, and at Villeneuve d'Ornon, near Bordeaux.

Plans for building have been sanctioned by the municipalities, but permission is still required from the prefects of the respective departments.

Monsieur Vacher's opinion is that the American beef packers, damaged by Upton Sinclair's "Jungle" revelations, want to make a fresh start on European soil, believing that their canned goods, bearing French labels, might sell freely without the stigma of Chicago attaching to the goods.

The beef trust, says Mr. Vacher, aims at supplying meat to France, England, Switzerland and Germany. In the latter country meat is scarce and dear, while prices are rapidly advancing in France.

RAISULI FINDS AN ADMIRER

French Woman Says Brigand Is Noble, Brave, Generous.

PARIS, July 27.—(Special.)—Raisuli, the Moroccan brigand, has an admirer in Madame du Gast, who met him personally during her mission to Morocco for the French government.

Discussing Raisuli's latest dramatic coup, which she described as "a very intelligent move," Madame du Gast paid a tribute to the noble character of the brigand. "I met him," she said, "at his own house at Zinat, four hours from Tangier. He strikes me as the type of Moroccan brigand. He is brave, cruel and active and, as so few Arabs show, he is educated. He has been able to attract numbers of followers to himself."

"I was received with great respect by Raisuli, as indeed by all the leading Moors with whom I came into contact. Raisuli can exhibit nobility and generosity. When he captured Mr. Perard, the American merchant, whom he treated extremely well, the prisoner's cook came to him and said he was deprived of a living on the beach at Tangier, opposite the Hotel Cecil. Here the man has erected a wooden building and established a restaurant."

SOUGHT REVENGE ON MORGAN

Why Italian Customs Officers Searched Millionaire's Yacht.

PARIS, July 27.—(Special.)—The inspection of Pierpont Morgan's yacht by the officials of the Italian customs at Venice has caused great amusement throughout Europe, although the millionaire himself was annoyed by it.

What is not so well known is that the incident arises out of a duel between Mr. Morgan and the Italian customs dating some years back. Up to now Mr. Morgan has all through had the laugh on his side.

When the famous Ascoli cope was offered to Mr. Morgan, it having escaped the notice of the customs, he had to accept commission, Mr. Morgan bought it. He then, as is well known, made a parcel of it and returned it without incurring it or even realizing it to Ascoli.

The King decorated him, but the customs people and the art commissioners were excessively angry and vowed to have revenge which they have been trying to effect ever since, but without any more satisfactory result to them than the failure just recorded.

GREAT VIOLINISTS IN COURT

Brothers Ysaye Accused of Assaulting Belgian Conductor.

BRUSSELS, July 27.—(Special.)—Eugene Ysaye, the great violinist, and his brother Theo, the composer, are being tried in a prosecution for alleged assault, heard in the Antwerp courts. The prosecutor was a conductor on a train which took the two musicians to Antwerp during the last few years is expected in Paris next week. He will be accompanied by two aides-de-camp and will make a pretty long stay in Paris. He will try to bring Incognito. The Belgian legation is about to move into a mansion in the Rue Deane Renard belonging to Comte de More de Fontignaud, and it will be ready for the Prince's arrival. The Crown Prince was in Paris last year for a short visit during which he visited all the battlefields of the war of 1870-71 and of the First Empire.

Professional Tricks Among Autoists.

LONDON, July 27.—(Special.)—Although automobile racing has only just been established as a regular sport in England at the Brooklands permanent racing track, questionable practices have already been discovered in the running of the racing machines.

Charles Jarrott, the professional motorist, who married the divorced wife of the Earl of Roslyn, writes to the papers complaining that automobiles competing in the Brooklands races are "doped" with oxygen to enable them to make spurts.

Old Men Play Nursemaid.

LONDON, July 27.—(Special.)—In busy Blackburn, a Lancashire cotton center, they have partially solved the domestic help problem by employing old men from the poorhouse as "nursemaids." It is quite impossible to get girls to "mind the kiddies" because the cotton mills absorb all the young female labor in the town. As many mothers work in the mills themselves, the demand for nursemaids is very high. Meanwhile all the girls who might be fulfilling these duties are working in the mills.
