

EAST SIDE FAVORED FOR GRADE SCHOOL

Association for Education of Deaf Sponsor for Meeting to Discuss Issue.

SABIN SAYS GO SLOWLY

Plan to Add Extra Mill to Levy to Stand Cost at This Time Argued as Untimely—Plummer Urges Immediate Action.

That the new trade school would be erected the coming year on blocks 55 and 56, Holladay's Addition, bounded by East First, Hassalo, Adams and Multnomah streets, and that provision should be made in the budget for this year was the sentiment expressed at a meeting held in East Portland Branch Library Friday night.

After discussion by O. M. Plummer, R. L. Sabin and Judge W. N. Sabin, a vote was taken and this site was favored unanimously. Mr. Sabin alone voting for the West Side location, or rather against erecting a new building at this time.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Oregon Association for the Education of the Deaf and Mrs. C. Ward, president, explained the object of the gathering. She called attention to the handicraft department on exhibition which had been made in the manual training department of the Buckman School, where the only school for the deaf in Portland is maintained.

Mr. Plummer pointed out on the map the location favored in Holladay Addition, and undertook to show that such location would bring the trade school closer to the people than if the West Side site were used.

Mr. Plummer said the trade school on the West Side is maintained in the old building, Eleventh and Couch, which is overcrowded and ill-fitted for the purpose. The old structure contains, he said, $100,000 worth of machinery. If the new site is selected, he said, there is a tract 200 by 460 feet, and machine shops could be erected according to approved plans for taking care of the trade school for many years to come.

besides there would be ample space. Practically, he said, the location is reached by every street-car line in Portland. The two blocks cost $125,000, and the building for the trade school will cost, said Mr. Plummer, $125,000, and by adding 1 mill to the levy the building can be erected.

Sabin Explains Stand.

Chairman Sabin declared that he had favored the trade school from the time he was elected director, but he contended that at the present time the trade school situation is cared for and can be handled for some time, without purchasing the East Side site and erecting an expensive building. "In my judgment," said Mr. Sabin, "the district has no more use for the two blocks on the East Side than a cat has for two tails. I am in favor of the East Side and the West Side, and I don't like to hear the terms used. I live on the East Side and do what little business I have on the West Side. It is not the handsome or expensive building which makes any school; it is the students and the teachers. The idea of college is illustrated by the picture of a student on one end of a log and John Hopkins on the other. We are taking care of the trade school very well in the old building at Couch and Eleventh and have provided eight rooms in the old Lincoln High School, which will take care of the trade school at the present time. Now my idea of the trade schoolhouse situation is this: When we build a trade school we should build the first unit on the site on the 100 near the Lincoln High School, purchased by the district for $50,000 some time ago. That location will be near the Lincoln High, with its great gathering of boys and girls. Then we can build another unit near the Jefferson High School, where we have five acres and where we can have a building near the Washington High School, where we must acquire the west balance of the blocks there. This would take care of the trade school situation for some time to come."

Taxation Factor Figured.

"It is my judgment that under the present financial condition that the additional taxation that will be burdened will impose too great a burden on the taxpayers of this city. You must remember that there is a limit to the taxpaying capacity of the people. I was at the polls last year when the taxpayers voted on the bond issue we asked for and heard some of the comments made as the taxpayers and home owners cast their votes. It was a warning to be heeded. Don't misunderstand me—I favor the East Side. I favor this site I don't think we should purchase this site and erect this building."

UNION AVENUE IS FAVORED

Greater East Side Club Discusses Relocation of Hawthorne School.

The Greater East Side Club, attended Friday night by delegates from 20 improvement clubs, passed resolutions favoring Union Avenue as the main approach to the proposed Interstate bridge across the Columbia River. The resolutions set forth that Union Avenue will accommodate the greatest number of people and connect with all the thoroughfares of Portland and Multnomah County. Delegation from the Union Avenue Development League was present.

A resolution was adopted favoring the relocation of the proposed trade school the ensuing year and having it lo-

MELBA, KUBELIK SHOW UNPARALLELED POWER

Great Musical Artists Draw Mammoth Audiences—Armory Secured to Accommodate Large Patronage Expected When Pair Appear Here.

MADAME MELBA.

THE extraordinary interest that surrounds the newly announced Melba-Kubelik tour and their concert in Portland December 4, has not been duplicated in many years in musical circles over the country generally. Each of these stars alone has unparalleled drawing power. Kubelik, for example, by himself alone opened the season October 5 in Chicago at Orchestra Hall to a 2500 house, the door sale being the biggest in the history of the hall, and 200 seats had to be put on the stage. This was record-breaking, and particularly so for a violinist, without any assisting artist.

Melba, of course, generally is recognized as surpassing all other stars in her voice. On September 29 she opened the season in Montreal alone to another record-breaking house, the amounting receipts reaching the astounding figure of $18,855. When it is remembered that each of these stars alone is able to attract colossal assemblies of music-lovers, some conception may be formed of what may be expected of the two artists in combination. The only problem in this remarkable offering of two world-renowned celebrities is to find an auditorium large enough to accommodate the vast throngs that desire to embrace this unusual opportunity of hearing the two stars, each without a rival. Only the largest cities can offer such an auditorium. The smaller cities are preferring circus tents and other ingenious and wildly desperate methods of meeting the difficulty, so eager are they to avail themselves of this extraordinary offering. In this way they hope to bring down the prices so as to enable the great mass of people to enjoy a treat that probably never again will occur in their lives.

The amount demanded by the Melba-Kubelik combination is of course such as to frighten many managers. Each star is accustomed to travel in all the luxury and magnificence of royalty. Kubelik has a special bodyguard, a devoted Hindu, to look after the safety of his priceless violin that he carries with him on tour. The insurance of these is another heavy item. Maids and valets and other adjuncts, together with the expense of private cars, special baggage facilities, etc., bring up the grand total to a fabulous amount. The Lois Steers-Wynn Coman arrangement of this city, undaunted by the magnitude of the enterprise, have determined to give the people of the Pacific Northwest an opportunity to hear Melba and Kubelik in combination at the lowest possible price. In order to bring down the cost of seats within reach of every man, woman and child who desires to hear these great stars they have engaged the Armory for the night of December 4. Every effort will be made to have the great hall comfortably warmed for the occasion, so that patrons will have nothing to inquire of the management of an evening of such music as comes only once in a lifetime.

BEAVERTON MAN READS THE OREGONIAN 51 YEARS

Henry C. Watts, Who Visited Portland in Early Days, Finds Fourth Street Blocked in Same Manner as Half Century Ago.

HENRY C. WATTS, of Beaverton, is a native Oregonian and has been a reader of The Oregonian for more than 51 years. He was born at Scappoose, and came to Beaverton when 7 years old. He used to read The Oregonian by the light of a tallow dip in the early days.

"I well remember going to Portland as a boy," he writes in a letter to The Oregonian. "We went with an ox team and I served as flagman. The roads were rough and full of ruts. Down the Canyon road to Jefferson street the way was so narrow that two wagons could not pass except at turn-outs. One had to go ahead and flag wagons coming in the opposite direction."

Arriving at Fourth street, they found it "just about the same as 50 years ago," Mr. Watts writes.

"It was blocked with a grading outfit in just about the same shape that I found it the other day when in Portland," he says. "We had to leave our wagon and walk the rest of the way into town."

He says that with the exception of Portland, he has 50 years has made a wonderful change in Portland, transforming it from a small town into a beautiful city.

Kerns School Folk to Meet.

The Parent-Teacher Association of Kerns School will meet in the auditorium of the schoolhouse on Tuesday at 3 o'clock. All parents in the district are invited to attend. F. S. Myers will give a talk on matters of vital importance to parents. Miss Lillian Tingle will speak upon the relative values of various foods. Mrs. Robert F. Clark, contraalto, will sing her repertoire consisting of a selection from the songs of Carrie Jacobs Bond. Arrangements have been made at the school for the care and entertainment of young children whom mothers may desire to bring. It is hoped that there will be a large and enthusiastic attendance at this meeting.

CITY DATA COLLECTED

UNIVERSITY PREPARED TO GIVE AID TO MUNICIPALITIES.

Service Like That for Farmers is Aim of Extension Department and Plans are Announced.

To give the municipalities and the other civic units of the state a service similar to that which is given the agricultural activities of the state by the Agricultural College extension work, is the aim of the extension department of the University of Oregon, and this year the department is well fitted to cooperate with the towns of the state in the study and solution of the problems of municipal government that arise.

Correspondence, lectures, personal conferences, exhibits and other methods of handling the matter are used by the department and it is developing material which has bearing upon practically any municipal problem that may arise.

In the announcement of the arrangements for handling the extension work this year the following statement is made:

"The extension department has upon its regular extension faculty Professor D. C. Sowers, who has specialized along the lines of political and social science at Columbia University, New York, and has for some time been connected with the training school for public service which is conducted by the bureau of municipal research.

"The department aims to do the following for the communities of Oregon: To assist and direct by correspondence and personal conferences, community or any special phase of its life.

"To cooperate with boards of county commissioners, city officials, health officers, superintendents of workhouses, county and state asylums, supervisors of the poor, so that the best information and best way of conducting the public business may be placed at the disposal of every public official.

"To cooperate with county and city treasurers and auditors and other financial officials.
