

COY TELLS HOW TO SAVE DROWNING

Multnomah Instructor Explains Handling Distressed Person in Water.

TOWING ON BACK IS EASY

Resuscitation Possible After Victim Has Been Under Surface Half an Hour—Above All Do Not Quit. Advises Expert.

While this is not the time of the year when drowning is a frequent accident...

Records of tales of accidents on water in the summer often end with the plaint that the rescuer was forced to struggle alone with the victim to keep from drowning.

J. C. Cody, swimming instructor of Multnomah Club, by virtue of having a record of life saved in one summer, is well qualified to talk on the subject of saving life.

In approaching a drowning person come up from the rear. That will stop him from getting any dangerous hold on the rescuer.

Victims Towed on Back. In this manner the man in distress can be towed in on his back, allowing the rescuer to sit in the middle of the victim without any trouble or interference with the legs.

Try to get the person in distress. If necessary choke him a bit with the tongue hold. When he finds that he is not going under, it becomes easy to tow him quite a distance.

If the man is overcome or unconscious when pulled ashore, place him flat on his stomach. Straddle the body, placing both hands under the diaphragm and raise the middle of the body, pressing on the stomach a few seconds to rid the body of the excess water.

Then turn the patient on his back, and pull out the tongue. This can be held with a dry handkerchief.

An unconscious person's jaws naturally try to close and a piece of wood the size of a chair rung will serve to keep them open. This must be done, for in the absence of the jaws will lock if not watched, and can only be opened with difficulty.

Resuscitation Work Described. Then start the work of resuscitation. Bring the head of the victim to the body and raise them up and over the head. Then back to the first position through a horizontal movement.

This should be done at least a minute. This should be kept up indefinitely. Don't give up hope. When the arms are raised the lower ribs rise gently but firmly upward on the ribs.

While this is going on, have assistants chafe the ankles and wrists to restore circulation. Send for a doctor. That should be attended to first of all.

Above all, don't quit. Persons have been revived after being under water the greater part of half an hour. That, of course, is unusual, but there is always a chance of bringing back life.

BALL TEAM SAID WEAK

STUDENTS LEARY OF WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY BASKETQUET.

Five Is Shot to Pieces by Students Leaving College, But Contests for Places Are Strong

WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY, Salem, Or., Jan. 17.—(Special.)—That the Willamette basketball team will be far weaker than the one which was the edict of the students and others who have watched the five in its practice for the last two weeks.

One man, Homan, who played last year is certain to play this, although Tallman may get into the game after recovering from a severe injury incurred last December.

Hepp, the star guard of last year, left college, failing to graduate. Yet, at the other end, Middle entered Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn. The loss of these two leaves the guard positions to be filled by new men.

At present the lineup consists of Homan, forward, and last season's captain, who is one of the strongest all-around athletes ever represented by Willamette, and who a few days ago was elected to a Rhodes scholarship at Oxford, England.

Rowland, fullback on the varsity football team, and Flegel, right end in football, are at present a little ahead in the race for guards, with Gaton, a varsity baseball man, crowding forward for a place.

Adams, a freshman from Idaho, and Carson, a Salem High School product, are the leading candidates for center. With the exception of Homan none of the more prominent present candidates are at all certain to develop within a few weeks, replacing them.

The first game of the season will be played with Multnomah Club team in Portland Saturday evening, January 24. A return game with the club men will be played here later. The University of Oregon team will be met in Salem, as will be the University of Washington from Seattle, along with several local teams.

Always in the past the basketball season has been prolonged into the spring weather and has interfered with track and baseball work so as to prevent early work in these lines. This year the basketball season will close in February and not be extended over into March, which, three seasons out of the past four, has been a splendid month for outdoor work.

LARSON'S BLANKET IS UNIQUE

Graduate Manager of Idaho Athletics Achieves Rare Honor.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan. 17.—(Special.)—Prominently displayed in a show window here is the red Athletic Association blanket of Gus L. Larson, the popular graduate manager of athletics at the university.

Mr. Larson's blanket has a unique interest, in that it bears more stars than any other Idaho blanket has ever had or can have again. Each year the Athletic Association buys blankets for those seniors who have won their varsity letters during three years of their college course in any one branch of athletics.

For the winning of each letter a star is placed upon the blanket. Orange indicates football; slate, track; green, basketball; blue, baseball. The stars are arranged in an arc 12 inches above the center of the great "T" which occupies the center of the blanket.

at the university. Mr. Larson's blanket has a unique interest, in that it bears more stars than any other Idaho blanket has ever had or can have again.

Mr. Larson's career as an athlete came before the days of the four-year college. He played in inter-collegiate games seven years in all. During his first year in the preparatory school he was merely a substitute, but the year was far keener on the regular varsity team and won 15 in track and in football.

CREW CALL THIS WEEK

CONNIBEAR, AT WASHINGTON, SEES STRONG VARSITY EIGHT.

Material Available Is Abundant and Promising, and Seattle Support and Confidence Increases.

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON, Seattle, Jan. 17.—(Special.)—Despite the fact that the University of Washington's first varsity crew will not meet any Western college in a regatta for more than four months Coach Hiram Connibear will next week issue his initial call for veterans to compete for seats on the 1914 eight.

Unusually promising conditions face the Washington varsity. This is because Connibear will not suffer by the loss of many veterans. Competition among the colleges is keen, owing to the increased interest at this university, and owing, too, to the fact that the Seattle business interests and the business men of the city are voluntarily coming forward in his support, to send the varsity East to compete again on the Puget Sound course.

The fact that the Washington eight made such a favorable showing last year has given the crew supporters confidence.

Among the 1913 crews expected to be out when the call is issued are expected to be the University of Washington, Waller, Max Walsko, chosen last year as one of the all-American crew; Edward and Elmer Lender, Wilson Lee and Hiram Connibear.

Connibear is especially pleased with the fact that the Seattle business men are voluntarily coming forward in his support, to send the varsity East to compete again on the Puget Sound course.

Stories About Stars

BY BILLY EVANS.

In his day Nick Altrock was one of the greatest catchers in the business. Pitches with more art than those of many, but few pitchers could win with the consistency of Altrock.

While this is going on, have assistants chafe the ankles and wrists to restore circulation. Send for a doctor. That should be attended to first of all.

Above all, don't quit. Persons have been revived after being under water the greater part of half an hour. That, of course, is unusual, but there is always a chance of bringing back life.

To the average fan of today, Altrock means nothing as a player. Nick to him is purely a name, an amusement, an antic on the coaching lines, and his comedy style of playing first base.

Altrock pitched in the highest of a baseball comedian. The public of course, cannot be blamed for such an opinion, for it is only in the comedy roles now that Nick shows to advantage.

Manager Griffith, however, carries Altrock for more than his coaching ability. There is no denying the fact that he adds much to the development of Joe Boehling, the sensational young southpaw.

Altrock during his entire career has always been a good fellow. He has perhaps been his worst enemy, always willing to lend aid, always a free spender, always enjoying life, Nick found it a very easy matter to get rid of his bank roll.

"Better drop in, Nick, and have tell you your future," suggested Egan. "Nothing doing, Jack," replied Nick. "My future is behind me." That remark made a deep impression on me.

I recalled the days when Altrock was the best of the South Side fans in Chicago, of the day he beat Mordca Brown in the opening dual of the 1905 world's series. Nick was probably thinking of the varsity football team, and Wood was third, with 1216.

On Friday night Wedell surprised the gallery when he rolled a score of 288 in 10 straight strikes. This was the highest score of the month on the Saratoga alleys.

In the Saratoga ragtime contest which closes tonight, O'Donnell and Al Arens seem to be the winners with a total of 1223. Chitry and Meek are second, with 1212, and Raymond and Wood are third, with 1210.

PORTLAND MAKES READY

Local Association Prepares to Handle Several Hundred Entries and More Home Contestants Are Wanted by Leaders.

The Northwest Bowling Congress tournament has been shifted ahead one week, according to an unofficial report, and there is little doubt now that the dates of the tournament will be April 6 to 11, instead of April 13 to 18.

Just what this will mean to Portland bowlers is best shown in that the association is preparing to handle 50 five-man teams, 80 doubles and 150 bowlers in the singles.

The Imperial alleys on the East Side are turning out some good bowlers, and this region will be represented by an able body in the coming tournament.

SEASON IS SCANNED

Dr. G. J. Sweetland, Jr., Has Retrospective Vision.

BY DR. G. J. SWEETLAND, JR. WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY, Salem, Or., Jan. 17.—(Special.)—The football season has just closed, and the University of Washington team administered a decisive defeat to the State University of Idaho team.

SPORTSMANSHIP IS LIKED

Conference Football of Past Year Put to Sleep Finally and Preliminary Glances Towards 1914 Year Are Made.

BY DR. G. J. SWEETLAND, JR. WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY, Salem, Or., Jan. 17.—(Special.)—The football season has just closed, and the University of Washington team administered a decisive defeat to the State University of Idaho team.

The University of Washington won again the Northwest College Conference championship from the other institutions comprising the conference of the State Universities of Idaho and Oregon, the Agricultural College of Oregon, at Corvallis, and Washington at Pullman, with Whitman College, at Walla Walla.

Washington won and won because of two reasons, and there two reasons alone, namely, because the Seattle team knows the rudiments of straight—call it old-fashioned football, or what-ever-you-please football—and this term means a great deal more than many believe.

In all-around defensive play, in blocking, charging, tackling and in every man doing some real work on every play, the Seattle eleven is strong. Then the other reason for the winning of the northern eleven is the fact that this team mastered the use of the forward pass to the extent that whenever hard pressed this play is unlimbered and effectually used.

The University of Oregon had a strong team with a heavy lot of linemen, a wonderful punter, place-kicker and passer in Fenton. With a backfield of first-class players, including Bryant and Cornell, four of the best and fastest backs the writer has ever seen in the Northwest.

With a strong lot of linemen left over and with a veteran backfield and a coach better acquainted with his men, the writer believes that next year will be the best in the history of the University of Oregon from the standpoint of football after the writer's first choice for conference champion in the 1914 race.

The Oregon Agricultural College had a most satisfactory season. Of course, the Aggies lost to Washington, so did all the rest, and the writer has never been able to understand this Washington score. After this game, surrounded with a team loyal to their coach and imbued with a spirit of loyalty for their institution, O. A. C. finished every reason to be proud of its team and the coaching of Dr. Stewart.

The State University of Idaho had a successful season. They always do when they win the game over Washington State, which means that they were truly formidable at the close.

The Washington State College team seemed to be a factor in the game, while heavy and strong, did not put together from the standpoint of team play enough to defeat any of the conference teams with the exception of Whitman. However, the prospects for a better team next year at Pullman are bright and Washington State is sure of being stronger.

Whitman fought well in an uphill struggle, having little good material to select a team from, and as is especially the case with the smaller institutions, cannot expect to turn out a team of strength each year.

In reviewing the work of the season the writer has been greatly impressed with the aid given college athletics in the Northwest by Dow Walker, the splendid sportsman and superintendent of the Multnomah Athletic Club.

Walker's interest in athletics and his strong stand for the best in games and contests is greatly aided this section in keeping sports on a high plane.

The work of the officials handling the football game has, in general, been good. The one marked fault that is the most evident is the tendency of some interested in football willingly to offer to officiate at a game, but when the game is being played, they are not in the game.

In closing this brief review of the season's work in football the one thought that has most impressed itself upon the writer's mind, after visits to Eugene and Corvallis, is the splendid spirit of love and loyalty to their team that is manifested by the student body at these places.

Development of this spirit within college halls at the time of college contests has been a matter of congratulation in after years in loyalty to the support of law and good citizenship long after the game has been forgotten.

It is a vital factor in the life of a nation, in its relation to intercollegiate athletics.

SCOTTS TO MEET BEAVERS Championship of Oregon League May Be Settled Today.

The second soccer game of the Mount Scott-Beavers series will be played today on the Mount Scott grounds. At the first meeting Mount Scott won, 6 to 0, and should the team win today Mount Scott will be declared the 1914 champions of the Oregon Soccer League.

Both teams have changed their lineups since the last meeting, and the strength of the Beavers cannot be estimated. The team has not been able to do much practicing if the Beavers win the game, the final contest will not be played for some time, as the Columbia University squad on the university campus next Sunday, and the following Sunday it is probable Lincoln High will play Mount Scott.
