JAMES BUCHANAN BRADY gave $250,000 to found a urological laboratory at Johns Hopkins after he had been cured of a serious disease of that type at the hospital. The building presented by Mr. Brady almost is completed. He has kept a careful eye on its construction, making frequent trips from New York to Baltimore to inspect it. Mr. Brady is little known as "James Buchanan," but as "Diamond Jim" Brady he is a National character.

is reported to have disappeared from Antwerp and it is feared by his friends that he may have been captured by the Germans. If he has the world will have some picturesque reading material on the line of atrocities, for atrocities are Savage-Landor's specialty. When he wrote of Tibet he told a story of having his eyeballs seared with hot irons and of other extraordinary cruelties which he said were practiced by the Tibetans who captured him. His latest claim to attention was his dispute of the accuracy of Colonel Roosevelt's discovery of the River of Doubt.

Hwang Hsing, the generalissimo of the forces of Southern China in the revolution and acclaimed by the reformers as the active mainspring of the Chinese revolution, has just arrived in New York and is stopping at the Hotel Astor, where he posed specially for a photograph October 4. The general is here to study the American form of government. Though elected Vice-President when the empire was overthrown, because of his opposition to Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the President, General Hwang sought refuge for a while in Japan.

FRENCH HERO CHEERED

Private and Captured Flags Greeted by Paris Populace.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—Two German standards were brought into Paris the other day, and taken in a motorcar through the city to the Invalides. In the car were three officers and one private. The private's face was radiant, for it was he who had captured, in hand-to-hand combat, the standard of the Fusiliers of Magdebourg, and he was coming to Paris to receive from the hands of General Gallieni the military medal for bravery. This is the account of the capture given by this modest hero, who is, by the way, a Territorial Reservist.

"It was very simple. It took place somewhere on the Ourcq. Carried forward by our rush, we found ourselves in the midst of the Prussians. As it happened I was the nearest to the German flag, defended by a Lieutenant. I rushed forward, bayonet in hand, and the officer fell with the standard. That's the whole story."

Another Prussian standard was carried up the boulevards on a military motorcar. On its swift passage hats flew in the air, and heartening cheers roared out. From all the side streets old men, women and children ran out hatless and eager, and there were smiles on faces that have not often smiled these days. The nightmare is lifting from Paris. A wind of victory, it would seem, is blowing from the field of battle, and hearts and brows are lifting.
