New Regulations Will Permit Shipworkers to Remain at Work in Yards.

BOARD'S POWER EXTENDED

Judicial Authority Vested in Exemption Bodies and Local Police and Postal Machinery Will Aid in Procedure.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 .- New regulations under which the remaining availables of the 9,000,000 men registered for military duty will be drafted for service with the colors were announced today by Provost Marshal General Crowder. The new regulations are coincident with the division of eligibles into five classes, and the circulation of the official questionaries which have been discussed in previous announcements.

The new regulations, as has been announced before, repeal all preceding regulations, cancel all exemptions and discharges granted under the old sys-tem and restore every registered man to his original status. He will here-after be required to undergo all examinations anew and present his claims for exemption again.

As the new classifications make more liberal provision for leaving men with dependents in the classes to be called last, it is practically certain that every man who had a legitimate exemption on the ground of dependency under the old regulations will get the same under the new ones. The first class, which embraces men wholly without dependents, is expected to bring in fully 2,000.-000 men. The questionaries, beginning December 15, will be circulated among the registrants at the rate of 5 per cent of each local registration each day. Volunteer medical and legal boards being organized in each district will assist registrants in making out the forms and supporting affidavits which are very complete.

Important Changes Made

Where the registrants are away from home districts or in other circumstances, application to the local board for a questionaire is required.

The most noteworthy change in the regulations, outside of the creation of an emergency fleet to permit shiporkers to remain at their jobs, are as Local boards are granted virtually judicial powers to summon witnesses and obtain information. Local police will see that any witness responds. "A definite programme of correspondence between the boards, state officials

The Secretary of War may revoke original classification, except that no man granted de-ferred classification because of depend-ents may be advanced in any way or order. When deferred classification has been granted for industrial or agri cultural reasons, a specially qualified registrant may be summoned out of

Under the new regulations, district must be returned to the local board. It is made plain that men already held by local boards for service will continue to be sent forward as needed until such time as the new class one in each district is sufficiently organized care for drafts from the district.

Volunteers Provided For.

Another change permits enlistment of registered men in the Navy and Marine Corps, where they are so far down on the call list as to make certain that their action will not delay the task of Army building. No credit is given for such enlistment on Army quotas, how-ever, and local boards are judges of Provision for voluntary enlistment in the Army and Navy is made by means of a voluntary waiver classification and the automatic advancement of the registrant to class one and his induction at once into the military service. Where the registrant has dependents, his waiver must be accompanied, how-ver, by waivers from those dependent on him, if not miners, or by affidavits showing that minor dependents will be adequately provided for, if there are minor dependents. Miss Maude E. Savage.

SALEM, Or., Nov. 17.—(Special.)—Miss Mande E. Savage, who succeeds Miss Esther Carson as assistant secretary to Governor Withycombe, has the distinction of being the first woman to handle the entire cleri-cal and stenographic work in the executive offices. Miss Carson resigned recently to become the bride of Hugh McCammon, of Seattle, and with her resignation the executive announced that he would discontinue the position of stenographer in the office and combine it with that of assistant secretary. Miss Savage has been acting as stenographer for the Governor for several months. Her home is in Salem.

How Great Britain Solved Labor Problem Told by Sir Stephenson Kent.

Head of British Munitions Commission Explains Situation Across Waters and Similar Action May Be Taken in America.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Nov. 17.—Shortly after this country entered the war Lord Northcliffe ventured the remark that the United States could learn much and profit greatly by studying and avoiding the early mistakes of England, but he coupled this with the further remark that he did not expect the United States would profit by those mistakes, but would blunder along for a time and learn rather by experience. His prediction, to a large degree, has come problem that has arisen in the United States since the outbreak of the war has so hampered the United States in its war preparations as the labor problem. And that was one problem that had been most carefully worked that had been most carefully worked out by Great Britain during the first three years of her conflict with Germany. In solving that problem Great Britain made many and costly mistakes, but by the time the United States joined the belligerents mistakes were no longer being made in Great Britain; the labor problem, so far as it bore on war industries, was solved. Two industries, both of them vital, have been cursed with labor disputes in the United States during the past seven the United States during the past seven months, the shipbuilding industry and the coal-mining industry. There have been sporadic troubles in other indus-tries, but they have been relatively unimportant. Great Britain had identically the same trouble, but she had no precedent to guide her; the United had before it the precedent set in England, but the United States did not choose to follow the British example. It is just now making the first step in that direction but the first step in that direction, but further steps will have to be taken, and probably will be taken when Con-gress comes to review the accomplish-ments of the past half year and makes further appropriations to keep war in-dustries going for the next fiscal year.

Legislation Demand Sure. There will be a serious demand for legislation this Winter which will make strikes unlawful during the continuance of the war. When that legislation is proposed it will open up in Congress a general discussion of labor because of the attitude of certain laboring men. But the Administration is not in favor of conscripting labor. The arguments in favor of conscription are many and they are strong, but with the Administration arrayed against the conscription of labor, with Samuel Gompers opposed to it, and the American Federation of Labor backing him up, it is hardly to be expected that a labor conscription law can or will be

But England solved the labor probthe bones of Christopher Columbus lem without resorting, to conscription. and today British officials, familiar with how England handled the labor problem, are informing American emproblem, are informing American em-ployers, that they may know what England has accomplished and may, if they approve, bring pressure on Con-gress to do as much for the United States. An address in New York by Sir Stephenson Kent, head of the Brit-ish Munitions Commission in the United States, has started an agrication for ish Munitions Commission in the United States, has started an agitation for legislation similar to that now in force in England, and this demand is expect-ed to grow as the subject is more gen-erally understood and appreciated. It was through a general munitions act that England solved the labor problem. That law exempted from military service men who were needed in the war industries, shipbuilders, coal miners, munitions workers, etc. Following Sir Stephenson Kent's address, General Crowder, Provost Marshal-Gen-eral, announced that on the next draft workers in shipyards will be exempted from military service so long as they remain at work in shippards and on Government contracts. This is the first decisive step the United States has made, showing that it has studied results obtained in England. One of the most important provi-sions of the British munitions law makes it illegal for labor to strike or to demand an increase of wages during the war. That section of the law is being rigidly enforced. Wages in England have increased, however, for the high cost of living is feit in England as in the United States.

Coast, but the scale fixed has not yet been universally accepted. Very soon the Wage Adjustment Board, which prescribed the wage scale for the Pacific Coast, is to hold hearings at Philadelphia, and, on those hearings, determine a wage scale for Eastern shipyards, the Philadelphia scale to apply generally along the Atlantic Three times a year a commission of productions inquires into the cost of necessities. When a big increase is found, a stipulated sum is awarded apply generally along the Atlantic Coast. But thus far American labor has not given these official wage scales by the government to the laboring men over and above their standard wages, but this is known and under-stood to be an "award" pure and simthe ready indorsement given in Engole to compensate them for the raise ple to compensate them for the raise in prices and is not an increased wage; it is a specific allowance to meet increased expenses due to war prices; it is not a permanent wage increase. In England the labor unions agreed to abandon all restrictive measures, such as make for the closed shop, etc., and the English unions have lived up to their agreement. When the United States entered the war Samuel Gompers gave similar assurance to the lag increases he will no less than three pers gave similar assurance to the President and Secretary of Labor, but that promise has not been kept; some of the most assurance to the line increases he will no less than three line increases he will not less than three line increases he will not less than three line increases he will not less than three line increases of the most serious strikes in the United States in recent months have been based on the demand for closed shop in industries and in cities where shop in industries and in cities where the closed shop rule does not prevail wages. Gentlemen: Just fifteen years ago today while in the harvest field a special agent for your company came to me and explained your policy which appealed to me as being the cheapeast protection for my money and at the same time making a good investment. I then applied for and received policy No. 18600. I paid an annual premium at age 34 of $29.10 making a total paid during the fifteen years of $586.50.

Today your General Agent, Chas. M. Stewart, hands me a draft for $785.34 the full cash settlement on my policy making a net profit to me of $188.64 and my family have enjoyed the fifteen years protection in addition. I have more insurance or I would have chosen the surplus en my policy which amounted to $332.73 in cash or all that I paid in except $253.77 and had a paid-up policy for life which would continue to pay me an annual cash dividend as long as I lived.

I surely thank this company for the pleasant relations and courteous treatment I have received during the fifteen years and would advise every young man to carry a similar policy as soon as he becames of an insurable age so that his premium will be less and mature right in the time of life that it may mean a great deal to his future success.

Yours very truly. Matured in the
