

COMING YEAR PROMISES TO BE RECORD ONE AT OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

Building Construction Pushed to Relieve Congestion on Campus and Faculty Is Being Strengthened to Meet Increasing Demands—Largest Attendance in History of School Expected.

Group of O.A.C. Buildings.

THE highest year in the history of Oregon Agricultural college is predicted not only from the standpoint of attendance, but also from that of standard of work. Building operations are being pushed with a view to relieving the congestion experienced last year. The faculty staff is being strengthened to meet the increased demands.

The vote of confidence given the schools and higher educational institutions of the state through measures passed last May is expected to work wonders in the educational system of the state. The voters have provided something like $2,000,000 a year for the improvement of elementary schools which will pour a stream of the brightest young people through the high schools and into the state institutions. Now that the college is assured an adequate supply for maintenance, plans are being made for the influx of students by giving them practical training under the most competent instructors obtainable.

Engineering to Draw. Engineering, in all its branches, which came first in popularity at the college last school year, is expected to draw fully as many or even more students in 1920-21. Engineers are in heavy demand in the northwest, particularly because of conditions arising through the war. Graduates in the 1920 class found no difficulty in obtaining responsible and remunerative positions—the supply, in fact, did not meet the demand.

Work is offered in civil, electrical, experimental, irrigation, mechanical and chemical engineering. Industrial arts fits graduates for mechanical trades, and for instructional work in the schools.

War conditions brought about an increased interest in scientific farming. The school of agriculture of the college offers courses in animal husbandry, dairying, farm crops, farm mechanics, farm management, horticulture, poultry husbandry, soils, veterinary medicine and other branches.

Forestry Occupations Varied. No profession is said to offer more varied occupation and more satisfactory rewards than forestry. The school of forestry offers work in forest administration, forest mapping, log scaling, lumber economics, logging methods and forest finance.

Mining is another field which is credited with offering great opportunities. The school of mining expects to train the men who will bring to light the state's extensive mineral resources.

The school of commerce trains students for business life. This department is growing rapidly, ranking third among the divisions of the college in point of total enrollment. The school of pharmacy meets the requirements of courses of students. The stamp of approval was placed on the college military department when for the third time the title of "distinguished institution" was given. More than a million dollars worth of equipment is used.

Home economics interested 557 students last school year and it is predicted that the 600 mark will be reached in 1920-21. Many other young women find the work they desire in the school of commerce, the school of pharmacy, the school of music, and even in some branches of agriculture. Many service courses are offered.

HILL REGISTRATION HEAVY
Cadets Enter Portland School From Many States.

Hill Military Academy's fall term will open September 15. Heavy registration already promises a large attendance. Cadets will be there from all parts of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and some from California. The school has government equipment and cadets are drilled by experienced army officers. Credits for the academic courses entitle them to college or university entrance. Nearly all the cadets graduated in June will enter college in the fall. The younger boys have a separate residence hall at 175 North Twenty-fourth street, Portland. The officers have quarters near the main barracks. In speaking of the academy, a Chamber of Commerce member said: "It is an asset to Portland, as it brings a substantial sum of money to the city. It is an advantage for the boys to be able to get the training in military, scholastic and the social side of life. The government inspectors have praised the school. The manliness of the cadets attests to the success of the training."

STUDENTS LEARN QUICKLY
Gillespie School of Expression Teaches Use of Inherent Powers.

To teach students to use both inherent and acquired powers efficiently is the aim of the Gillespie School of Expression. Through its years of existence, this school has enabled students to acquire all knowledge quickly and easily. The school has been passed upon as an "institution" by the state superintendent of public instruction and is endorsed as such by many prominent men in various professional and industrial lines. Ex-service men who are entitled to state educational financial aid are privileged to use this state aid in this institution. After attending the course of instruction offered, one should be able to converse more readily, to read a book more intelligently, to listen to a concert more understandingly, to interpret from the platform or the stage more convincingly, to teach, preach or argue a case at law more effectively, to transact business more successfully and to live the common, every-day life with more artistry.

Few applicants for admission to the school are regarded as undesirable, for most of them have a laudable ambition and a capacity for work.

A limited amount of summer work is being carried on during July and August. The full semester opens on September 14. A series of studio recitals are given each year, to which anyone interested may gain admission. The principal of the school is Emma Wilson Gillespie.

AVIATORS TO BE TRAINED
L. L. Adcox Plans Most Complete School in West.

One of the most complete aviation schools in the west will be opened in Portland soon by L. L. Adcox, president of the Adcox Auto and Gas Engine School. The new institution will be the first school of its kind in the Pacific northwest.

Mr. Adcox has just purchased 11 airplane motors from the government and will leave soon for the east to buy two new, modern airplanes. According to Mr. Adcox, he will offer an aviation course in which the student will receive training in overhauling and repairing all kinds of airplane engines as well as flying.

"To teach the student to fly without teaching him all about airplane engines and construction would be like teaching one to drive an automobile without showing him everything about the engine," said Mr. Adcox yesterday. "Such a course would have no commercial value to the student. On my trip I will hire two overseas aces and as soon as I can locate a good landing field, we will open the most complete aviation school in the west."

"Our auto school has grown to such an extent that we are having a three-story building constructed that covers 100 by 100 feet, giving us 20,000 square feet of floor space. The building will be located at East Hancock and Flint streets. We had more than 300 students in one class last season and more than 200 of them were Oregon ex-service men, while about 30 disabled soldiers were placed in training by the government and seven students were placed with us by the state industrial accident commission."

BOOKKEEPERS IN BIG DEMAND
Link's Business College Is Known as "Success School."

The demand upon Link's Business college for trained bookkeepers and stenographers is far in excess of the supply at the present time and is still on the increase. For this reason the school has the reputation of being the "success school" of Portland. Many former students are now in the civil service, some in Washington and others in this city and at various points all over the United States.

How Oregon is striving to make its ex-service men independent

The fellows who dug trenches in France have not come back to dig ditches in the United States—not if Oregon can help it—for she is taking definite steps to make her returned heroes independent. She is preparing them to make good in a substantial way by training them for business—ABSOLUTELY FREE.

The Oregon chaps who wore olive drab and blue are keenly sensing the really big opportunities. That is why so many of them are getting into the automobile game—the third largest industry in the United States.

Men of normal ability and common sense are getting training that enables them to make $150 to $500 a month in this great industry. Those who are getting into the business now stand a wonderful chance to forge far ahead during the next couple of years. For statisticians estimate that by the end of 1921 TWO AND TWO-THIRDS MILLIONS MORE MEN WILL BE NEEDED. This on top of the fact that over 4,000,000 are now employed in the manufacturing, selling and repairing ends!

Opportunity is fairly seeking the man because the auto industry is growing so amazingly fast. The first man opportunity seeks is the man who KNOWS—the TRAINED man. Ex-service men realize this. They are going after the training—especially when their home state pays their tuition.

When an ambitious chap gets a broad fundamental ground-work in auto and tractor engineering,
