A Pleasing Play Presented by Proficient Artists.

Corvallis is well supplied with talent in all lines. In music we have people who can entertain an audience splendidly with both vocal and instrumental selections; our band is second to none in the state; our art decorators, while "hiding their light under a bushel" are still known to be doing artistic work. We have promising orators and many good elecutionists. But that the dramatic field has not been neglected was strongly evidenced last Friday night by the play "Comrades," which was rendered before large and critical audience. The progress of the play from the first curtain rise to the finale was marked by smoothness of producton, and absence of awkward hitches and breaks. The company had been less than three weeks in learning and drilling on the drama, and the splendid manner in which it was presented is an evidence of the ability of the young ladies and gentlemen composing the cast. Miss Ora Spangler as Mrs. Manning acted

This is somewhat a different role than any he has heretofore been seen in, and served to display the versatility as well as the high order of his ability. John Allen was dressed happily and spoke his lines in an ally in the love scenes with Bess, securing a generous share of applause. Henry Pape took the character of Matt Winsor as the drunken tramp who reforms under the influence of his old comrade, Roy. Probably this is the most difficult role in the cast, and Mr. Pape, especially in the heavier scenes, displayed an artistic conception of the part and won for himself merited applause. Bert Van Cleve took the comedy part of Simon Stone, a "jack of all trades," and rendered it in an inimitable manner. His natural gifts as a comedian were displayed to good advantage, making him the recipient of many compliments, and he was recalled afthe his song "The Bowery Grenediers," A. His sweet voice and excellent expression found immense favor with the au-dience. The gentleman can be congratulated on his exquisite vocalization.

Cooper Acquitted.

The time of the circuit court was taken up last Monday in trying the trespass case of the state vs. Cooper. This matter came before Justice Wilson not long since, when the defendant was found guilty and fined $25,00 and costs. The trouble grew out of a contract between Cooper and J. A. Moore regarding some clearing that Cooper was doing on the farm of Moore's wife, which is located near Albany. Cooper was repeatedly warned off the premises by trespass notices but failed to heed the warning, so was arrested. The evidence introduced at the trial was considerably mixed and each party seemed to have some rights in the matter which could have been adjusted by a civil action. After a very few minutes deliberation the jury returned a verdict of acquittd. Disputes of this kind should never come into the criminal court for adjudication. l'axpayers have burdens sufficient without being compelled to defray the expenses of such trivial litigation.

Her mirth-loving disposition has gained for her many friends in Corvallis who will join her student friends in wishing that she may soon return.

On this occasion Miss Bloss had in vited Mrs. Casto and the young ladies at the ladies' hall to spend the evening with her. Wednesday morning the thought occurred to Mr. Will H. Bloss that this would be a good opportunity to give his sister a surprise and immediately put the idea into execution by inviting the members of the ladies' mandolin club and their husbands, together with a few other friends, to spend the evening. At 8 o'clock the guests began to arrive and before o the parlors of President Bloss' home were filled with a merry company. The rooms were tastefully decorated with potted plants and about the fire-place ferns were arranged with pleasing effect.

Music was the order of the evening and several excellent selections, vocal and instrumental, were rendered. Miss Ora Spangler, Wallis Nash and W. Gifford Nash delighted the company with well executed piano instrumentals. Miss Hattie Friendly, with her wonted grace and talent, recited "The Secrets of the Heart," by Austin Dobson. The "blonde quartette," Messrs. Bloss, Vates, Johnson and Fulton, sang one of their taking songs and responded to a hearty encore. Will. Bloss screwed his voice up several points and sang a song to good effect on his hearers, but the effect on his voice was too much and he was unable to respond to the continued demand for a repetition.

After a dainty lunch had been served the ladies' mandolin club played several pieces that completely captivated those who listened. Miss Bloss' piano solo and encore, though a trifle sad, was well received. Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Bloss assisted in receiving and did much toward the success of the evening.
