CITY AND COUNTY.

COMPLETED.—The bridge across the Coast Fork at Whittemore's old ferry was completed this week.

IMPROVEMENT.—Mr. F. B. Dunn is making extensive additions and improvements to his dwelling house.

RETURNED.—Mrs. W. H. Hanchett, who has been visiting friends in the East since last spring, returned last Wednesday.

WANTED.—A good steady girl to learn the dressmaking and millinery trade. For particulars inquire of Mrs. M. J. Watkins, corner of Eleventh and High Streets.

TAKE NOTICE.—Abel & Welsh only remain one week more, and those wishing really first-class pictures should avail themselves of this opportunity, as the chance may not occur again.

INDEPENDENT.—A saucy pheasant flew into Charley Horn's gunsmith shop on Wednesday. After this show of bravado, it took its departure before the man of guns could gather it in.

DRESSMAKING.—Mrs. Watkins and Mrs. McCain are having the building adjoining Miss Rankin's Bazar on the south, tastefully fitted up for a dressmaking establishment, and will move in a few days.

TROTTERS.—H. G. and Charles Hadley, started on Thursday with three young trotting horses for the State Fair. Judging from the appearance of these horses, we predict that they will make a creditable record.

CHURCH SERVICES.—There have been services at the Christian Church every evening this week. We learn that there have been quite a number of additions to the church, some by letter and four or five by baptism.

RENOVATED.—The St. Charles Hotel is undergoing a thorough course of repairing and refurbishing, when it will be perfect in all its appointments, and under the management of Mrs. Renfrew, the experienced landlady, will be second to no house in the State.

J. B. Underwood is engaged in the brokerage business. He buys and sells gold, silver, currency and exchange, and negotiates loans, on personal or real estate securities. He will be found at the express office, and will accommodate all who apply with the necessary collaterals. His ad. will appear next week.

HORSE STOLEN.—Last Tuesday evening, a horse was stolen from the barn of Mr. Washburne near Junction. Early in the evening an attempt was made to steal a horse from a neighbor of Mr. W., but the thief was discovered and made his escape, but succeeded in his second attempt. The thief is supposed to be a fellow whose name we have not learned, who broke out of the calaboose in Junction that day.

MARRIED.—In this city, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. J. S. McCain, on Wednesday evening last, Mr. Frank Hadley and Miss S. A. Pounder.

Compliment received. We congratulate our friend Frank and his fair bride upon the auspicious commencement of the most momentous journey of life, and sincerely hope that their cares and disappointments may be few, and their joys many.

"BAR" HUNT.—Some facetious cuss came rushing into town Thursday, and reported that a large bear crossed the road ahead of his team just across the river. Three or four hunters tooted up a dozen hounds and repaired in all haste to the place, and found a—hog track. The left-handed benedictions showered upon the head of the practical joker by the disappointed nimrods were more profuse and emphatic than pious.

FIRE.—The dwelling of Rev. Mr. Douglas at Springfield was burned last Tuesday night. Mr. D. was at home alone and being unwell, had lit a candle, which by some means was upset and caught the paper on the wall, running up into the story above. By the assistance of his neighbors he succeeded in saving his furniture. His library was burned. The house was insured for $700, and the library $300.

WHEAT.—Buyers paid last Saturday as high as $1.07, sacked and delivered on cars. Prices opened weaker this week, buyers paying from $1.01 to $1.03, and predict lower prices. They base their opinions upon the fact that the crop in the Western States, and all over the country, except California is fully from 75 to 100 per cent. more than last year. This large surplus of wheat will commence to go forward in October, and will have the effect to keep prices lower in Liverpool for the present if not for the entire season. While crops do not come up to the average on the continent, the surplus all over the world will more than make up the deficiencies.

DIED.
On Wednesday evening last, Mrs. Geo. W. Fletcher and infant. Mrs. F. was a daughter of Mr. E. Blackley.

On Rock Creek, in Wasco county, on the 14th instant, Minnie Myrtle, infant daughter of Josephus and Alice Martin, aged two years and twenty-four days.

WILL CURE CONSUMPTION.
To all suffering from the following diseases a ray of hope is offered through the kindness of a missionary friend who has sent me the formula of a purely vegetable medicine which has long been used by the native medicine men of Hindostan—for the positive and radical cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Throat and Lung difficulty, General Debility, Loss of Manhood and all Nervous Affections, its power has been tested in hundreds of cases without a failure. I now feel it my sacred duty as far as possible to relieve human misery and will send the recipe—FREE OF CHARGE—to any person who may desire it with directions for using. Sent by return mail with addressing with 2 stamps naming this paper. Dr. O. R. Brigham, Drawer 28, Union, N. Y. September 29, 77—19.

A TRIP TO THE FOSSIL BEDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE GUARDIAN:

In compliance with a suggestion from you, I will attempt a brief description of the fossil deposit in the northeast angle of Lake county, and make some references to the topography of the country thereabouts.

I left home on Tuesday, the 12th of June, in company with Mr. Thos. Swift of Eugene, and the Sunday following—the 17th—arrived at Summer Lake, where I have some business interests. Here we laid over until Tuesday, when in company with John Partin, Sr., John Partin, Jr., T. F. Partin, and M. Sult, who kindly consented to accompany us, we started for the fossil bed, a distance of about 40 miles, the last 25 of which was over a very rough country and without water.

It would be proper to say we were on horseback, with our kitchen packed on two driven horses. In the afternoon of the second day, we arrived at the fossil bed, and stripped our stock, turning them on a scanty allowance of miserable grass. The fossil remains lie scattered over the earth for a distance of four or five miles in the direction of northeast and southwest, the strip being probably a mile wide. Near the southwest end of the deposit are two small lakes or ponds, highly impregnated with alkali, the water having a milky appearance, with a disagreeable taste and smell. We sunk holes near the lake, into which the water seeped and was of a better quality than that in the lake, but not good. We named these ponds, or bodies of water, "Fossil Lakes," applying the prefixes of east and west to them.

Silver Lake and Summer Lake both lie on the confines of the great desert, by the crossing of which so much suffering was experienced by some of the early Oregon pioneers, the desert lying north and east of these lakes. Silver Lake is encompassed by "rim-rock," except on the northwest. On the east there is a gap which leads into a basin nearly circular, and which is probably about thirty miles in diameter. This basin is surrounded by rim-rock on the south, southeast and west, rising to the height of many hundred feet, with occasional breaks or canyons, sloping into the basin. On the north and northeast of the basin the ascent is more gradual, but at a distance, presenting an uninterrupted barrier. The surface of this basin is comparatively level, being subject however, to slight inequalities in the form of hills or low ridges rising but a few feet, the whole heavily set with sage (or artemisia), greasewood and other small but kindred growths. The soil, if we may call it soil, seems to be composed of light sand and volcanic ash, with a percentage of vegetable mould into which a horse will frequently sink to his fetlocks. Near the center of this basin, and about 18 miles from Silver Lake, in a northeast direction, is "Christmas Lake," eight miles from Christmas Lake, in the same direction, and apparently on the same level, are the Fossil Lakes. About 5 miles further on, in the same direction, are two springs of tolerably good water. These springs are about half a mile apart. I heard the most northerly called Duncan's Spring, and we called the other Mound Spring. The rocks about Silver Lake and Summer Lake, where stratified, appear to dip to the north. From twenty to forty miles in a northwest direction from Fossil Lakes set in the lava mountains, or rather mountains of lava.

It would seem that these fossil remains might have remained buried from four to ten feet in the earth, and therefore unknown to the prying eyes of the antiquarian, but for the action of the wind. There seems to be a constant current of wind from the southwest. All that space where bones are found appears to be scooped out to the depth of several feet, and carried, some of it, to a distance of from five to ten miles, where it is piled up in every conceivable form, evidently by the action of the wind; conclusive evidence of this is found in the numerous little mounds still remaining and able to resist the action of the wind by the aid of the roots of some more vigorous bunch of sage or greasewood. These mounds present a beautiful example of stratified formation often five or six strata, ranging from three to eight inches in thickness, very clearly marked. On the lower levels of this excavation is where the fossils are found.

We found fossil bones of the elephant, camel, horse and elk or reindeer. The horse being much more abundant than either of the others, but all being so clearly marked as to leave no doubt as to their identity. There were other bones apparently of large animals, but your correspondent was unable to name the animal they once belonged to. Among the fossils found the smaller quadrupeds had a representation, bones answering in size to the fox, and where were found; also others answering in size to the sheep or goat in size and appearance.

Remains of birds were very plentiful, some very large, others quite small. Waders, swimmers, scratchers, and probably climbers were recognized. The vertebra or backbone of a fish, or some other animal with a backbone like the fish, are found in great plenty; also bones like nothing I ever saw before, therefore I will not undertake to describe them.

The second day we were at the fossil bed, Mr. Geo. Duncan formerly of this county, and Mr. Smith, both now of Lake county, and Mr. Lee Dutton, who lives at Christmas Lake came to us, and that night we spent at the springs five miles from fossil Lake.

The next day after returning to the lake and collecting a few more specimens, we concluded to abandon a country that produced nothing more inviting than old bones, horns, and toads, muspouts, and the ever present, but never visible, but always feebly gnawed, and that the wind keeps, not only the air, but your mouth, nose, eyes, and ears full of sand and alkali dust. This was the fourth day away from Summer Lake, and we arrived at Christmas Lake that evening, and partook of the hospitality of Mr. Dutton, which was both bountiful and excellent, and best of all, cheerfully bestowed. Our fossils of which we have about two hundred pounds, are now on our pack horses, and it is not known whether digging would yield profitable results, and if it did, any number of holes might be sunk before striking "any dirt."

Not being a scientist, I have no theories to offer as to the time when these animals lived, or the circumstances attending their death, or what were the necessary surroundings in order to preserve their bones to the present time. J. W.

St. Nicholas for October, fifty closes up the Fourth volume of the magazine, and ushers in the Autumn with brisk stories, lively pictures, and such gentle thoughts as suit the time of year.

Henry W. Longfellow supplies some strong and beautiful lines under the title "Haron Al Raschid," and Donald G. Mitchell ("Ik Marvel") contributes the biographies of "Two French Story-Tellers"—Bernardin de St. Pierre and Madame Cottin, whose portraits accompany the article—with able illustrated epitomes of their chief works, "Paul and Virginia," and "Elizabeth; or the Exiles of Siberia."

The poem, "Mother," by Mary Mapes Dodge, blends a rare hopefulness with tender sadness of its theme; and together with the admirable frontispiece, forms a striking whole. George MacDonald brings to a close his simple narrative of Scottish life, entitled "Gone Astray," the lovely affection it depicts receiving a second charming illustration in the verse immediately following it, and beginning "There's a ship on the sea!" Thomas Moran has capped the stanza with an appropriate drawing. "The Little Girl who Grew Smaller," by Emily H. Leland, is a story that will captivate the young folks; and "Which Had It?" by Sarah Winter Kellogg, with a capital illustration by J. W. Champney, is a tale that has no end of fun and puzzling uncertainty about it.

Lucy Larcom introduces the youngsters to the wonder-world of "Autumn Poetry," in a way to set them exploring it on their own accounts, in an article that is remarkable for the aptness and beauty of its selections, and the charm of variety afforded by its pictures. Noah Brooks has a story of patriotism, entitled "A Century Ago," that is full of genuine boy-interest; and William H. Rideing presents a graphic account of adventure in the Sierra Nevada under the title "Caught by the Snow," the paper being illustrated by a picture into which Thomas Moran has put the very child and rush of the winter storm. A whole year's series of Star papers is concluded in this issue by Professor Proctor; and Mr. Trowbridge's serial brings his hero to mastery of himself pointing a moral sorely needed by the youth of to-day. Mr. Park Benjamin, in some admirably humorous verses and sketches relates the rise, course and sad ending of "The Revenge of the Little Hippopotamus." The boys will find Mrs. Kate Brownlee Horton's article on the game of "Hare and Hounds" a very attractive one; and the interest of the girls is likely to center upon a paper on "Moss-Pictures" which details a new kind of fancy-work. Good as is this issue of St. Nicholas, the announcement upon its cover promise for those yet to come, a number and variety of attractions altogether unprecedented. Not the least of the good things in view is the new serial story, "Under the Lilacs," by Louisa M. Alcott, which is to begin in the issue for November.
