TO PROWL, MY CAT. You are life's true philosopher,

- An egoist in sable fur, To whom all moralists are one.
- You hold your race traditions fast. While others toil you simply live, And, based upon a stable past, Remain a sound conservative!
- You see the beauty of the world Through eyes of unalloyed content, And, in my study chair upcarled, Move me to ponsive wonderment.
- I wish I knew your trick of thought,
- The perfect balance of your ways. They seem an inspiration caught From other laws in older days. Your padded footsteps prowl my room
- Half in delight and half distain. You like this air of studious gloom When streets without are cold with
- Some day, alas! you'll come to die And I shall lose a constant friend. You'll take your last look at the sky
 And be a puzzle to the end.

SHOSHONE FALLS.

Phenomena Which Give Rise to Stories About This Wonderland.

Strange stories are told of phenomena that appear at the Shoshone falls. Sometimes when the air is perfectly still the spray arises several hundred feet above the walls of the canyon and can be seen on the plains at a considerable distance. Then for days and weeks at a time there is scarcely any spray at all. Often the whole canyon around the falls will be filled with spray, and every bark and rock will drip with moisture. Again it will be as clear as a frosty night under the same conditions from influences that no one has been able to discover or ex-

Often above the monotone of the falling waters weird sounds may be heard unlike any that were ever named and can be compared to no other, and again from time to time a sudden throbbing is audible, measured by regular intervals, like the beating of a human pulse. These, too, proceed from no apparent cause, and science has been unable to solve their mistery.

At the crest of the highest rock in the center of the Shoshone falls is the nest of an eagle, and for 34 years the same bird has come regularly on the 26th, 27th or 28th of March to repair and recocupy it and raise a broad of young. Charley Walgomet first noticed her when he located here in 1860. The nest was standing then, and as long as be lived there, until five years ago, he kept a record of her reappearance. She never varied more than three days in her arrival. Since his time the record has been kept by others, who testify to the same regularity. The spray from the falls carries a sediment which clings like frost to the ows of the little hotel and can be scraped off with a knife. Mr. Keller, who keeps the place, says that they clean the glass every spring by laying the suches flat and pouring upon them a solution of vinegar and salt. After they have scaked for three or four days the coating can be wiped off with a cloth, but in a few weeks the glass is covered again, as if it was frosted. The scrapings look like the dust of lime. The same sediment clings to the leaves of the trees and vegetables that are grown around the place and can be scraped off the rocks and the face of the bare clay. -Chicago Record.

Nature Pursues a Liar.

"The forces of the universe are in league against a lie," says Emerson, and what his terse, penetrating pen would find to say where the lying involves perhaps mortal danger to human beings we will not presume to say, but will illustrate our meaning as follows: In December, 1887, a child that had died in Connecticut of diphtheria was brought to Pittsfield, Mass., for burial. The parents came with the body to a house in Pittsfield, and a public funeral was held. Within a week and while the parents of the child still remained as visitors at the house a child who lived in the house was taken ill with diphtheria and died. Then came a humiliating confession from the Connecticut parents. They said that the symptoms of the second child were just like those of their own and finally acknowledged that arrangements had been made with the physician in attendance upon the case to write a certificate of death by bronchitis instead of diphtheria. Other cases followed in the same house. -Philadelphia Press.

Digestible Food.

One of the biggest mistakes about food which people make is to forget that the true value of food to anybody is the measure of its digestibility. Half a pound of cheese is vastly more nourishing, as regards its mere composition, than half a pound of beef, but while the beef will be easily digested and thus be of vast service to us the cheese is put out of court altogether for ordinary folks by reason of its indigestibility We should bear this rule in mind when we hear people comparing one food with another in respect to their chemical value.—Londor Hospital.

Domestic Weather Prophets. Probably everybody knows that there more or less clearly the quantity of moisture in the atmosphere. A strip of seaweed hung in an exposed position frequently does duty as a popular and easily comprehended weather glass, although it may be doubted whether its predictions are of much value. More reliance can be placed in the behavior of a pine twig, which may very readily be pressed into service as a domestic weather prophet. - Cologne Gazette.

The mole is not blind, as many persons suppose. Its eye is hardly larger than a pinhead and is carefully protected from dust and dirt by means of inclosing hairs.

Mount Desert island was thus named by Champlain on account of its barren appearance.
