

PAYS TRIBUTE TO COOS BAY

Convention of Southern Idaho Commercial Clubs at Pocatello.

POCATELLO, Ida., Oct. 25.—The fifth annual convention of the League of Southern Idaho Commercial Clubs which just closed here, paid a handsome tribute to Coos Bay and reiterated the pledge of Idaho's aid in securing the developing of that harbor by adopting the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the League of Southern Idaho Commercial Clubs in convention assembled does hereby commend and endorse the work and purposes of the Oregon-Idaho Development Congress, involving the improvement of Coos Bay harbor as the nearest deep sea port of entry on the Pacific coast, to Southern Idaho, and the construction of a railroad from that port eastward through Southern Idaho to an independent connection."

In its writup of the convention, the Pocatello Tribune has the following:

"The League of Southern Idaho Commercial Clubs was attended by three of the greatest boosters of the Pacific northwest—Colonel E. Hofer, president of the Oregon Development Congress, Colonel Edgar M. Heigho, manager of the Idaho Northern railroad, and Reilly Atkinson of the Boise Commercial Club. Each of these gentlemen is unique in his own field. Colonel Hofer is a born organizer and promoter of enterprises on a large scale, and is virtually at the head of the railroad that is being pushed through from Coos Bay to Boise. Over one hundred miles of location survey and right of way are completed, and the work of construction begins this fall. The line runs from the richest section of this state across the virgin territory of Central Oregon, direct east and west to the largest harbor on the Pacific coast between Puget Sound and San Francisco, having four hundred square miles of the finest coal fields on the coast, and seventy billion feet of fir, spruce and cedar timber, and 15,000 population, and cities with paved streets and solid brick blocks for miles on the water front. A port commission has been organized under an act of the Oregon legislature that is spending $500,000 building four miles of waterfront that is to be the western terminal of the new transcontinental line. Col. Hofer is a newspaper man of German descent and a man of wonderful executive ability, promising to be another Henry Villard in the development of the Inland Empire, and finding a new outlet to the Pacific and the Orient by a route that is several hundred miles nearer than any present transcontinental line."

CATCH YOUNG PANTHER.

Rogue River Men Utilize Novel Scheme.

The Gold Beach Globe says: "The freeing of panther by dogs and shooting them out in ordinary way, is sport that has grown too tame for E. R. Miller and Tom Owens. Last week their dogs treed a young Panther, about the size of a full grown wildcat which they concluded to capture alive instead of killing it. They first tied up their savage dogs to keep them from killing their prize as soon as it struck the ground. The panther had climbed as high as the tree would bear up its weight and was defying its enemies from its lofty position when Miller shot off the support from under it; letting it come tumbling to the ground. The fall somewhat stunned the young but savage brute and the boys jumped on to it with ropes and securely tied and carried it home in captivity where it has a large drygoods box for a home."
