Americans With Roars and Shrieks Rush on the Rebel Trenches and the Insurgents Run Like Mad—The Division Bivouacs on the Streets of Calumpit and Wait for Fresh Supplies and Ramons.

CALULUT, Luzon, P. I., Aug. 14.—A battle above the clouds suggests the farthest possible remove from what MacArthur's division performed on August 9. To dwell at length on not mere discomforts but on the actual obstacles that were overcome could be done only by using the three words water, mud and sugar cane over and over again.

The move was an advance in line of the entire division, starting from San Fernando, where the division has been quartered for three months, and proceeding in a northwesterly direction to this place. The troops engaged were the 9th, 12th, 17th and one battalion of the 22d regular infantry regiments, the 51st Iowa and Bell's 26th volunteers. In addition, eight field pieces participated in the movement. And that extremely noisy and equally formidable contrivance, the armored car, pushed by a laborer's gang of Chinamen, sputtered and spit bushes of shells and bullets from its position on the railroad track at our center.

General MacArthur having made a personal reconnaissance late on the afternoon of the 8th, the orders to move, long expected, but hitherto delayed by the heavy rains, were sent to the various regimental headquarters at about 9 o'clock at night. There resulted no undue noise or haste. A simple field order set forth the general plan, position of regiments and that one day's rations and one hundred and fifty rounds of ammunition should be carried on the persons of the men. Additional rations were to follow by bull carts, and pack ponies with ammunition were to keep up with the line. Sitting at my window at 2:30 the next morning, I saw through the clump of bamboo and native fruit trees the glare of cook fires along the straggling village street. Occasionally a battalion adjutant or orderly would splash through the mud on his way to a company commander with a belated instruction. Gathered around the hurrying cooks little groups of men stood and talked of the prospect of a fair day, finding meat ration cans against tin cups, or filling canteens with clean, good water from the barrels standing back in the edge of the fire light. Presently the welcome cry of "come and get it," the army cook's call, started them into hastily formed lines, and then the strong smell of steaming coffee, drifting on the morning air, told us that but fifteen minutes would elapse before the movement to position would begin.

with the work, and battery E of the old 1st and emphasized their reputation. Over on the left Hobbs, with K of the 12th, made scows of his field pieces, certainly they were never wheeled to position. Swift kicks cooled, drenching cook fires and the cooks, hurrying to their shacks for belts and rifles, called sharply back to the two or three "extra rations" found in every company. "No seconds; do you never get filled?" Again a rattling of tin cans and cups were being replaced in haversacks or hooked to canteen straps, and dimly seen lines along the road side were now to be discovered: at first ragged and broken, but rapidly filling as the men hurried to their places under watchful eyes of sergeants and company officers. Company files company; battalion connects with battalion, and soon in the village street was to be seen only widely separated sentinels left over storehouses and quarters with an occasional group of Chinese litter-bearers, herded along by the hospital corps men, jabbering excitedly and all together as to possible loot; or, calling back to a lonely looking sentry as they hastened by, "Mucho boom-boom! Pa' in!"

Five o'clock. Dawn swiftly running shows a long line of men in brown standing knee-deep in water waiting the signal for advance. The long, swinging move to places had been made without a single shot of alarm having been fired by insurgent look-outs. Never have I known a more complete exemplification of the calm that precedes the storm. Occasionally a battery horse stamped heavily or a riding pony nipped a stock of sweet cane as a mouthful of desert for his almost forgotten breakfast. Then, from far away on the railroad, Lieutenant Briggs, with his 6-pounder and "tack hammers," as the men call the gatlings, gave the word for advance. "Forward; guide right," ran from right to left, and forward blew the brass trumpets. It was a case of wade from the start. From ahead scattering shots sounded at detached points along the insurgent lines. A great craning of necks and much peering into bamboo thickets followed. "Go ahead, men; go ahead!" Squash! Splash! answered a thousand pails of feet, as they surged through mud and water, and then, at a thousand yards from the now plainly seen line of bamboo, spoke the first real resistance; a clean cut volley splashed in the pools ahead, around or far behind. "Go ahead, men; no firing; go ahead." A cane field is just before us; the stalks tower high above rifle muzzles as the men, with a great splashing and rustling, disappear within the stiff blades. Now the battalion on the right opens and the left bixes out. "Take it easy, but go ahead," bawls the field officer in the battalion in our front, but his voice is lost in the splashing of feet and rustling of cane blades. The trumpeters, with one eye on company commanders and the other looking out for a possibly extra ugly mud hole, keep the two short and one long notes of "forward; march," ringing clear above the racket. Still the men can see nothing of the enemy. Ah! there's the edge of the field. And then, with many a precautionary "steady, now," on the part of officers, the men are at it. How long? I don't know. Four hundred yards ahead, across a knee-deep sheet of water, a streak of brown, with a thin line of drifting gray as a crest, shows dully against the silver green background of another cane field. It is the insurgents' trench. Like perfect machines our men nip shining cartridges from the blue web belts with eager fingers. Home snaps the breech mechanism; up the barrel comes into the line of sight of eyes that have never left off watching that brown ribbon of earth ahead. Even "hospital corps" from right to left turns the heads of but few. Off to the right now rings a cheer. It is Wise, the "little officer boy" of the 9th. "Go in H company," he pipes; and mudstained, wet, panting, but victorious, the whole line, with roars and shrieks, plows across to the goal. But there is a second work! "Quick, men, 500 yards distance!"

SYSTEMIC CATARRH.

Thousands Suffer From It and Do Not Know It.

Hon. A. T. Wimberly, Collector of the Port of New Orleans, La., and member of the National Republican Committee, in writing of Pe-ru-na, says:

Dr. Rachel A. Magaw, of West Jefferson Street, Springfield, Ohio: "Your Pe-ru-na is worth its weight in gold. I feel like a new woman. I can't praise it enough. I spent a great deal of money on doctors, but nothing ever did me any good until I sent you and tried your Pe-ru-na. I now feel well of the catarrh."

A constant drain of mucus from the system is known as systemic catarrh. This may occur from any organ of the body. Systemic catarrh is more common in spring and summer than in the winter.

Dr. Rachel A. Magaw, of West Jefferson Street, Springfield, Ohio: "Your Pe-ru-na is worth its weight in gold. I feel like a new woman. I can't praise it enough. I spent a great deal of money on doctors, but nothing ever did me any good until I sent you and tried your Pe-ru-na. I now feel well of the catarrh."

Ralph W. Chulip, of La Porte, Ind., says the following as regards Pe-ru-na for catarrh: "I had been troubled with catarrh for the past eight years. I became so bad a year and a half ago that I took treatment from two different specialists on catarrh. The discharge from my head was dreadful. Finally my stomach became affected, and eight months ago I had to quit work. I lost in weight from 165 pounds to 140. I was completely discouraged. I procured a bottle of Pe-ru-na and had not taken half the bottle, when, to my joy and surprise, I began feeling better. My head began to get better; the discharge began to dry up. I kept on, and have now taken two bottles. I have resumed my work, have a good appetite, and have not felt better in ten years. I am now 30, and I thank Pe-ru-na for the way it has helped me."
