der Mr. John Redmond may be regarded more as a personal triumph for that stalwart independent than as having a serious bearing upon the politics of the immediate future. The organs of all the Irish parties are unanimous in declaring he is the right man in the right place. Yet, since the downfall of Charles Stewart Parnell, Mr. Redmond and has been against almost every other man's, steadfastly refusing all compromise, until by sheer strength of character, he has forced his countrymen to acknowledge his abilities as a leader of no mean order. However, while his party continues to act without ulliance with any English section, he can accomplish practically nothing. If the present felicitous or ganization proves permanent, which some people doubt, it may be a powerful factor after the conclusion of the war, especially subsequent to the next general election.
