The Victoria Colonist says H. M. S. Scarus is back in Bequimait from a cruise in Behring sea. She brought bad news for those interviewed in the sealing industry. The season in Behring sea has been a complete failure, all of the 40 or more schooners which are out having miserably poor catches. Bad weather rather than a scarcity of seals, is responsible for the unfortunate situation.

The management of the Pioneer Woolen Mills of Dallas which has been making propositions to towns and cities throughout the Northwest, for the past three months, to move the mill to any location giving it the necessary encouragement in the way of a bonus, has at last found a city in California that wishes to invest in such a property. This little city of 7,000 people proposes to move the machinery from Dallas and add to it as much more new machinery from the East, and place it in a building erected by the people on lands donated by them. It is estimated that the mill will cost the people of that town a little over $26,000.

Dan Canuto, foreman for Jos. Suprenant, came from Portland on the train Sunday night, and during the ride had two teeth knocked out. Doc Farrell was on the train and got into some difficulty with a Chinaman and pounded the heathen up badly. Canuto was in the car and remarked that it was a "shame" to see a helpless Chinaman when Farrell replied by striking Canuto in the mouth, knocking him down and "out," and when he recovered he found that two of his teeth were missing. Canuto says that he will wear out a warrant for the arrest of Farrell, charging him with assault. Yesterday afternoon Farrell, continuing his spree of the night before, became too obnoxious and was arrested on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. He will be held to appear before Judge Nelson this afternoon.

It is a wonderful soap that takes hold quick and does no harm.

No harm! It leaves the skin soft like a baby's; no alkali in it, nothing but soap. The harm is done by alkali. Still more harm is done by not washing. So, bad soap is better than none.

What is bad soap? Imperfectly made; the fat and alkali not well balanced or not combined.

What is good soap? Pears'.

struck once in front of Reeder's and after considerable difficulty got clear, but had scarcely gone a quarter of a mile before she struck again, this time to stay awhile. The predictions of old pilots seem to be coming true that the floating sands of the Columbia would eventually fill the channel to such an extent as to render the upper portion of the river useless for navigation. The Penthesilla is loaded with wheat and draws 22 feet. When the Bailey Gatzert passed her yesterday morning she was about in the middle of the stream. It is thought that if she cannot be gotten off before, that the high tides of next week will lift her off.

Statistics compiled by the census enumerators tend to show that since the advent of the white man in large numbers in the gold country and in Northern Alaska the Eskimoes are dying off rapidly and are destined in a few years to become almost if not quite extinct. Arthur C. Jackson, president of the Alaska Geographical Society who spent two months during the past summer in the territory says: "The condition of the native Eskimoes in Western Alaska is pitiful to behold. During the past year disease has wrought much havoc among them, and unless some measures are taken shortly, by the government, to better their condition it will only be a short time until that race of people will be numbered with the past. During our travels, for my wife was with me, we saw many touching sights, some of which are never to be forgotten. To the advance of civilization is partly due their state, for it cannot be said that the Eskimoes have yet adapted himself to the new conditions. While I was at Cape Nome I talked with the census supervisor. He informed me that many of his enumerators, who did the work in the Koyukuk district, brought in with them stories of an appalling nature. He said that in several of the districts, from the reports that he had received he was convinced that fully 90 per cent of the Indians had died from disease and privation since the enumeration began. In several of the sections that we visited we found little Indian huts in which there had been no fire for the entire winter season. Wood was scarce; the head of the family was either dead or ill with some one of the many diseases that have been rampant among the Indians of that section during the past season, and there was no one left to go on a journey for wood. So through the long winter day and night these impoverished people lived in squalid poverty with no fire to keep the body warm or with which to prepare a meal, should the visitals be in the house with which to do it.

During a recent interview the captain of a ship now lying at Tacoma is quoted as saying: "When the question was up before congress much was said about the protection of the salmon; but an experience of many years at sea, both before the mast and on the quarterdeck has convinced me that anybody who loses any sleep over the wrongs done this class of sailors had better bestow their sympathies upon some other class of laborers. Now, don't misunderstand me. I am not harsh in my judgment on sailors, but upon the class of sailors who generally are the ones who kick up a fuss about ill-treatment, poor food and insufficient wages. On my voyage to Japan ports, and from there to Australia for coal for 'Frisco, so that by the time I reached 'Frisco I had been on the way fourteen months, as I had long waits in all the ports of call. Now, my crew consisted of sixteen men before the mast, and every man of these had not less than 30 pounds coming to them, and yet, you can believe me or not, but before I had been in 'Frisco four days, all I had left of my sixteen men was four, the other twelve had shipped over the side, leaving 30 pounds wages due them; and I am willing to wager not a single one of these was shipped in even as well found a ship as the one they had deserted from; and two of them I afterwards learned had shipped in a packet that the mate was arrested for brutally beating the crew. Another thing in this question of crimping sailors is the question of charter rates. As long as rates are ruling low, away down in the twenty-shilling scale, sailors are then getting the identical wages they are getting now when freight rates have jumped up to near the fifty-shilling mark, therefore I don't see that the ship owners have really much of a kick coming if the boarding house runners try and make a little extra money out of the high rates prevailing, and if you come down to hard facts, the one who is being 'jobbed' is the farmer who grows the grain in the eastern section of this state."

CIRCUIT COURT.

Wong Loong Pleads Guilty to Charge of Manslaughter and Is Sentenced to 12 Years' Imprisonment and Pay a Fine of $50.

Court opened yesterday afternoon after having stood adjourned since Thursday.

The trial of Wong Loong for the killing of another Chinaman at Booth's cannery, about August 1st, came on and by his attorney, Mr. Winton, defendant entered a plea of guilty of manslaughter, which was accepted by the prosecuting attorney. A number of witnesses were examined to show previous reputation of defendant. The witnesses were for the greater part Chinamen and were examined through C. C. Cummings, of Portland, as interpreter. The judge stated that the testimony as to the prisoner's previous reputation was not of much weight and then sentenced him to undergo an imprisonment of 12 years in the state penitentiary and pay a fine of $50.

Two curious little bits of paper or silk were introduced in evidence, said by the interpreter to be high-blinder's certificates.

Timothy Corbett, charged with assault with intent to commit rape, was arraigned for trial in the circuit court yesterday. He had entered a plea of not guilty to the charge, but, with the consent of Prosecuting Attorney Allen, was permitted to enter a plea of guilty to a charge of simple assault. Mr. Allen stated to Judge McBride that both the complaining witness, Mrs. Denk, and her husband were very anxious that the case should not be called, Mrs. Denk being unwell and unable to go through the ordeal of again testifying in the matter. Inasmuch as the complainant was not seriously injured, Mr. Allen was inclined to agree to the proposal of C. W. Fulton, attorney for Corbett, that his client be allowed to plead guilty to simple assault. Judge McBride imposed a fine of $150, in default of which Corbett
