Visitors to the Mining congress should not depart from the city before seeing the most magnificent scenery on earth from the decks of the newest and fastest steamer plying in these waters. The steamer washington street every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 7 a. m. for Vancouver, Washougal, Latourelle Falls, Bonneville, Cascade Locks and all other landings between Portland and The Dalles, passing through the grandest array of natural scenery on any steamboat route in America. Tourists from all parts of the world acknowledge this. Those who have traveled over both continents freely declare that Columbia river scenery is not surpassed on earth, and passengers on the Spencer are enthusiastic in praise of the steamer and its superb equipment. Its table service is not excelled at any hotel in Portland.

Substantial improvements are being made on Grand and Union avenues between East Clay and Belmont streets. An elevated roadway is being built on Union avenue between Madison and Belmont streets while the remainder of the thoroughfare is simply having the surface of the street redressed. Planking on the double tracks on Grand avenue is nearing completion. When the work is finished the traffic between Stephens addition and central East Portland will be divided between them, as they run parallel. They will give better access to the Madison street bridge while the Morrison street bridge is closed for repairs.

There is smoke enough in the atmosphere to make one's garments look like they were ironed with a gas heated polisher. Steam heated polishers, such as we used in the Union laundry, Second and Columbia, never "yellow" the linen—just because they are steam heated. They don't burn the threads of the goods, either, and for that reason apparel laundered at this institution wear much longer than when punished by the fire-heated ironers. Tel. Main 398.

Work on the Tanner creek sewer is being rushed in order to have the drain completed by the time the winter rains begin. Three shifts of eight hours are working each day and great headway is being made. The workmen are no longer interfered with rushes of water down the drain since the overflow from the city water mains is being caught in one of the reservoirs near the park. If nothing interferes the new works.

B. B. Beekman, a native son of Jacksonville, the oldest mining camp of this state, where gold was mined in 1851, presented to President Richards, on behalf of the Jacksonville board of trade, a beautiful gavel of manzanita wood, bound with gold taken this spring from Rich gulch, of that county, and bearing this inscription: "Presented by Jacksonville Board of Trade to J. H. Richards, President of the American Mining Congress, in annual session, August 22-27, 1904, Portland, Or. Gavel and gold from Rich gulch, Jacksonville, the first mining camp in Oregon, December, 1851." This original and highly apt idea of connecting first work with the present was conceived by George H.
