SNAKE RIVER BOAT MAKES GREAT SPEED

CONKING DOWN MERRIMACK MOUNTAIN SINK SKEWET FAME, BUT GOES UP CURRENT CAUSE IT TO PROCEED AS SNAKE'S FACE—DRAWS ONLY 20 INCHES OF WATER.

Thirty miles an hour is frequently the speed shown by a little craft which is plying between Lewiston and Eureka, the head of navigation on the Snake river.

The Mountain Gem is the name of the vessel, and she is operated by Capt. C. F. Allen of Clarkston, Wash. The captain arrived in Portland this morning, and in speaking of the steamer he says that he actually believes that on several occasions she has averaged as high as 35 miles an hour for a short distance.

"You see," explained the visiting navigator that part of the Snake river is one of the swiftest streams in the west. Between Lewiston and Eureka there are many rapids. In fact, there are so numerous and close together that the entire stretch of water might be said to be made up of one long swift running current, and a boat is carried along at an almost incredibly rapid rate.

The Gem steamer way down there more swiftly than the average train goes. Many who have watched her going over one of the worst rapids say that they are positive that she was making no less than 35 miles an hour.

The Gem only draws 20 inches of water, and was built for speed. During the past two months she has been engaged in the grain carrying trade. Every trip made of late she has transported on an average of 200 tons of wheat. It is estimated that the vessel will be kept busy for the next two months before the grain has all been moved from that section of the country.

"When it reaches the railroad," says Captain Allen, "the wheat is put on cars and sent to Chicago. Practically all of the wheat in Idaho will be sent east this year. Tributary to Lewiston the latest estimates show that there will be at least 75,000 tons of the cereal shipped out of the country. Of this amount the Mountain Gem will handle in the neighborhood of 42,000 tons.

While going up stream against the rapids the captain declares that the steamer can only proceed at a snail's pace. On board is carried 4,500 feet of cable line. When the vessel comes to the strongest of the rapids it is necessary to fasten one end of the cable to the boat and the other to a convenient rock on shore. In this manner she is pulled to a point where she can continue the voyage for a short distance under her own steam.

Shippers Expect Carnarvon Bay's Cargo Will Be All in Friday.

By Friday night it is expected that the British ship Carnarvon Bay will be fitted out with a wheat cargo and ready to depart for the dark continent.

All of the ships in port are either receiving or discharging cargo, but none of the others will be in shape for sailing before the latter part of next week.

The Niomeadia is expected to sail from Moji, today for Yokohama and from the latter port she is scheduled to sail for the Columbia river on October 22.

Mr. Schwerrin will probably make a hurried visit to Portland this week. But as he has sent word to the same effect on various occasions he will likely not be here until he has actually arrived.

Ship Captain Notices the Improvement of a Score of Years.

Captain Griffith of the British ship Carnarvon Bay, returned yesterday from a trip to Seattle, where he was the guest of Rev. Owen Jones, assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

"Twenty years ago I was in Seattle for the first time," said Captain Griffith, "and I assure you that I found many changes. Of course, I have been there since, but I always compare the place with the time I first saw it. Then there was plenty doing for it was at that time that a raid was made on the Chinese section of town, and all the Chinese were forced to move to other climes."

"But while Seattle has had a wonderful growth, the same spirit seems to be in the air of the northwest, for when I first saw Portland, nearly a score of years ago, the city was nothing compared to what it is now. It is now one of the best known ports in America. One meets ships from Portland in nearly every section of the globe."

NEW CUSTOM RULES. Regulations issued by Dominion of Canada officials.

Under the British preferential tariff new regulations are required on all invoices of goods admissible into Canada.

The attention of the local custom house officials has been called to the matter, and they are requested to use their influence to see that the regulations are fully complied with when any goods are shipped from this port into the Dominion of Canada.

The shipper is required to certify that be in the exporter of the goods sent across the international boundary line, and that the invoice in all respects is correct. The price and quantity of the goods has to be stated. It is necessary that the cost of the goods given should represent the market value of them at the time that they are exported.

"It will be very necessary for you to see that these regulations are carried out to the letter, as the custom officials are very strict on this side. You will notice in addition to the certificate, you must invoice all goods on a special form in triplicate on the back of the regulations. It will save everybody a considerable amount of trouble if you will follow out these instructions carefully."
