

INDIAN FIGHTER IS GUARANTY POOLROOM

Veteran Keeps Silent Vigil Night and Day by Order of Sheriff Word in Warwick Club's Premises Is Armed to "The Teeth"

In the heart of Portland's business district, where the hum of commerce sounds incessantly, where people throng the sidewalks, where wagons and trucks crowd the streets, and where even a railroad train joins its noise and clamor to the din of traffic, there stands a veteran Indian fighter, armed with rifle and revolver, watching as faithfully and vigilantly as if he were stationed, on the plains, sentry to an emigrant train at night. He pays no attention to the crowd and the hurrying throng has no time to devote to the queer spectacle.

Jasper Fuller is the hero of many an Indian fight. Many years ago he won a reputation for deeds of daring and was known and feared by all the hostile tribes. When nerve was needed and men were wanted of valor and courage, Jasper Fuller was always in the list that was sought. Age has not diminished his valor, nor time his intrepid spirit.

Wears Deputy's Badge.
By order of the sheriff he is stationed at the Warwick Club and poolrooms, on Fourth near Alder street. He looks the oath of a deputy and wears a badge to announce that fact. He is not vainglorious and the ornament is not a badge of defiance to be flaunted in the faces of those he holds in check, but a sign of authority and one of courage.

Though the shining symbol may be empty of significance in the eyes of those who faint would enter, the magazine of his rifle is always full. There are no empty chambers in the revolver he carries in his belt. There is a leaden ball in every cartridge in the rifle. There is determination in his voice and in his eyes and those who know him are aware that he would shoot as quickly as an arrow across that threshold without permission, as if he saw an Indian creeping stealthily towards his camp. Hence no one has tried to enter, though many smile when they see the shining emblems of authority.

Jasper Is the Man.
The task of guarding property that has been seized by the sheriff and holding it till disposition is made by the courts is one requiring courage and discretion. That is why old Jasper Fuller was selected. He will laugh and joke and listen to the remarks that are made outside for his especial benefit and not be least ruffled. He will answer back and refuse a drink as reluctantly as another, but he is too practical in the game he is now playing to lose his head even for a single moment.

He is the butt of raillery for the sports. Behind the door he guards are the idle wits and ticklers. There are charts and blackboards on which the entries at Laticia and New York many days old still are posted. The place is empty save the venerable guard who stays there night and day. Outside crowds of loungers gather, and they "Open up, old man," they say, "and let's get a drink."
"See if you can cut the end off my shoe lace with a bullet," says another.
"Here's one," says Jasper, and he looks at the man who says he fought against you in the Rogue River wars and you ran away," say others.

There are many good-natured taunts and jeers, but the old man never retorts.
"Keep it up, boys," he says, "but keep it up outside. Don't ever try to come in that door. If you do, I'm afraid I'll have to teach you Willie-boys how to do the hot-foot away."

He eats there and sleeps there. Deputy sheriffs from the court house carry him food three times each day. Inside he has blankets and pillows. When he grows weary of his vigil he catches himself on his blanket just as he did years ago under the starry sky, and sleeps.

He sleeps, but the slightest sound near the door awakens him. He sleeps with his revolver in his belt. His rifle is near. To take him by surprise and secure entrance to the place while he is supposed to be asleep would be about as easy as taking Fort Arthur with a bunch of "hot shots" from the funny page of a Sunday supplement.

When old Fuller was placed on duty at the Warwick club he was told to hold it at all hazards. Those who placed him there know he will obey their instructions to the letter. Those who own the place and desire to do business know equally as well that the old man wouldn't hesitate a moment to pull a trigger.

Crowds Tease Him.
Every night the crowd gathers about the streets in front of the place and call to him. They yell suppressed war whoops and hoot like an owl or imitate the coyote's dismal howl and do other funny stunts in vain endeavors to make the old man believe he is back on the prairies where he fought the Indians many years ago. He listens but only laughs.

During the day busy Portland hurries past the door. Only those who know the old man is stationed inside cast a curious look in his direction. He does not heed the crowds nor do they heed him. He is doing that which he has sworn to do even as they who are passing are striving to do what is given them.

The Old Man Talks.
"Can I shoot?" he repeated curiously.
"Well, I reckon so. It's been a long time ago since I did much in that line, but the old man ain't gone none to the end on eye-sight and his fingers certainly is working just as they used ter."
"No, there ain't nobody tried to push past them doors and if they take the advice of an old man they won't. You see, I ain't down here for the fun of it, though it ain't the worst job in the world. I am a sworn deputy—and was told to keep people out of them doors no matter what happened. I ain't the kind that forgets to obey what I am ordered to do."
"The boys think they're mighty smart and funny when they come round here nights and stand on the outside and jolly me through the doors. I never get mad at them, for they are having their fun just as I used to do and I don't begrudge nobody that. I jolly back but it all ends there. No one ain't going to pass that door till old Jasper Fuller is told by the proper authorities to let 'em come in."

average, and did not represent picked samples. Another sample ran as high as $33.56, there being 4.10 per cent copper. Sulphur, iron and a small amount of tellurium were also detected. The minerals. Iron ran as high as 42 per cent at times, with 10 per cent lime and silica, but 28 to 35 per cent, making an excellent smelter charge. The presence of tellurium was also detected. Favorable developments in the last work done has encouraged the management to press work steadily, and the crosscut commenced down the hill to open the Ajax and Smuggler veins at from 250 to 300 feet depth, will be driven during the winter. Supplies have been laid in for this work. Drifts are to be run on both veins soon as they are opened on this lower level, and the gravel pit out the ore that is assured by the large body opened above.

SNOHOMISH MINERS GET HIGH GRADE ORE

President McKinley Mitchell, of the Smuggler Mining company, operating in Snohomish county, Wash., yesterday received a report from the last samples brought down by Manager Walters. Both quantitative and qualitative analysis were made, as the management desired to know what the return on the ability of the ore at the Everett smelter. In ore samples from the face of the workings on the upper level, where the ore body has a width of about 30 feet, the ore is 12 to 15 per cent silver and eight tenths of one per cent copper, or a total value of $29.82. The management said that this was

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER

He Cured Himself of Serious Stomach Trouble by Getting Down to First Principles.

A man of large affairs in one of our prominent eastern cities by too close attention to business, too little exercise and too much worry, had become so nervous that he was unable to pay nature's tax, levied in the form of chronic stomach trouble; the failure of his digestion brought about a nervous irritability, making it impossible to apply himself to his daily business and finally deranging the kidneys and heart.
In his own words he says: "I consulted one physician after another, and each one seemed to understand my case, but all the same they each failed to bring about the return of my normal digestion, appetite and vigor. For two years I went from pillar to post, from one sanitarium to another. I gave up smoking, I quit coffee and even renounced my daily glass or two of beer, but without any result. My friends had often advised me to try a well known proprietary medicine, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and had often perused the newspaper advertisements of the remedy, but never took any stock in advertised medicines nor could I believe a fifty-cent patent medicine would touch my case.
"To make a long story short, I finally bought a couple of packages at the nearest drug store and took two or three tablets after each meal and occasionally a tablet between meals, when I felt any feeling of nausea or discomfort.
"I was surprised at the end of the first week to note a marked improvement in my appetite and general health and before the two packages were gone I was certain that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was going to cure completely and they did not disappoint me. I can eat and sleep as enjoy my coffee and cigar and no one would suppose I had ever known the horrors of dyspepsia.
"Out of friendly curiosity, I wrote to the proprietors of the remedy asking for information as to what the tablets contained and they replied that the principal ingredients were aseptic pepsin (government test), malt diastase and their natural digestives, which digest food regardless of the condition of the stomach.
"The root of the matter is this, the digestive elements contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food, give the overworked stomach a chance to recuperate and the nerves and whole system receive the nourishment which can only come from food; stimulants and nerve tonics never give the rest which they give a fictitious strength, invariably followed by reaction. Every drop of blood, every nerve and tissue is manufactured from our daily food, and you can assure its prompt action and complete digestion by the regular use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, you will have no need of nerve tonics and sanitariums.
"Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been in the market only a few years, yet probably every drug store in the United States, Canada and Great Britain now sells them and considers them the most popular and successful preparation for stomach trouble.

TITLE TO TAILINGS TO BE DECIDED IN COURT

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
La Grande, Or., Nov. 5.—A case was up before County Judge Eakin yesterday in which he heard a motion to dissolve an injunction obtained from the county court at Baker City, on behalf of the Virtue Mines Development company against Earnest Dale Owen of Chicago, manager of the Cyclone mine.
Mr. Owen alleges that he bought all the tailings on the property, and that they were from the old mill before concentrates were saved and it seems that the tailings proved more valuable than other party supposed. The judge is expected to hand in his decision in the case Monday.

SPOKANE PLACER CO. COMPLETES A DITCH

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Spokane, Wash., Nov. 5.—The Cedar Valley Mining company has just completed the two-mile ditch from the river to the placer mines of the company, and from now on the mines can be supplied with sufficient water to work the gravel on the Swauk for 10 months of the year.
The Cedar Valley company is composed of Spokane men and much work has been done on the property during the last two years. The gravel pays well, but there was not enough water on the claims to run a giant for any length of time, and the ditch was constructed for the purpose of getting water enough for three giants. With the ditch completed, the company will get the pipes in shortly and gold will be taken out this fall.

CUTTING BLACK FOREST GEM.

From Louisville Courier-Journal.
"The stoneworkers of Germany are among the most interesting persons I have ever seen when engaged in cutting their jewels," said A. F. Hankhead of Memphis, who has traveled extensively in Europe.
The principal industry is at Freiberg, on the edge of the Black Forest, in which the precious stones are found. The principal jewels are amethyst, lapis lazuli and malachite. They are found in veins which are this as compared with ordinary mineral deposits, and in the rough are shaped exactly like any other stones that are dug out of the ground.
The process of cutting them is the interesting part of the work. All of them are cut under water, and the jewel cutters lie flat upon their stomachs while at work. A huge water wheel is fitted with the necessary cutting apparatus,

The noted firm has dissolved partnership after 40 years as leading manufacturers of fine clothing. The name of Cahn, Wampold & Co. is a household word wherever good clothes are worn in the United States. Mr. Cahn retires to become an active member of the Chicago stock exchange. Their entire wholesale reserve stock and goods in process of manufacture were bought by The Chicago at 60 per cent of value.
