PROPERTY OWNERS OVER ASSESSED

Do Not Want to Pay Cost of Steel Bridge Over Marquam Gulch.

SOUTH PORTLANDERS STRONGLY PROTESTING

Mass Meeting Will Be Held to Put the Remonstrances in Proper Shape.

Property owners of South Portland are organizing to resist the collection of assessments of costs of building the steel bridge on First street over Marquam gulch. They are much dissatisfied over the assessment of costs made by the city auditor, and are circulating remonstrances against the method of assessment. Many of the property owners claim they are assessed altogether too much for the benefits they derive and the amount of property they own. Hundreds of names are being placed to the remonstrances. Four of the petitions are being circulated. One is to be found at Cottrell's drug store, First and Grant streets; another is at Jones' drug store at First and Gibbs streets; a third is at Hoffenden's store at Corbett and Hamilton streets, while a fourth is at Hoffemper's cigar factory, 728 Corbett street.

The people in this section of the city claim they are being assessed altogether too heavily this season. There are seven big improvements either completed or nearly completed and another is being commenced. Six of these improvements are immense fills, while one is the First street bridge. The cost of the fills amounts to nearly $70,000 and the First street bridge $62,365, of which the City & Suburban railway pays $15,489. The First street bridge to be constructed will cost over $60,000, making the total assessment of this district for improvements within one year nearly $175,000.

To all this the residents believe they should not be subjected. They have entered but few protests to the assessment of costs to them for the fills, but they do protest against paying for the bridges. It is in this spirit which is at the bottom of the organization in that neighborhood at the present time. Property owners feel that no district assessments should be levied to pay for constructing a bridge. They argue that it is a general improvement and benefits the city generally and should be constructed by the city as a whole.

The property owners are in sympathy with the residents of east Portland who are attempting to hold off the construction of the bridges over Sullivan's gulch at the Grand and Union avenue crossings until after the legislature meets, when they hope to have the charter changed so that the cost of construction of bridges may be assessed to the general public instead of a small district.

A mass meeting of the property owners will be held in the near future, when the matter will be thoroughly discussed. Every effort possible will be made to hold up the payment of the assessments for several months, as they have great hopes of having the charter changed in which case the two bridges will be paid for by the whole city instead of their small district.

POOR JAMES BRADY MOVES ON AT LAST

Homeless Wandering Printer from New York Dies at County Hospital.

James Brady is dead. The end came Monday. He had been suffering from consumption at the county hospital for some time, and death came as a relief. The man had been a wanderer from one town to another. It seemed that no one wanted him. He was always told to move on. The hacking cough that racked his system did not cause strangers to sympathize with him until the hand of death had almost grasped the frail body. Just a month before he died, Brady arrived in Portland, having been sent here from Eugene. His case was brought to the attention of County Health Officer Dudley Evans, who had the sick man taken to the county hospital.

Brady was nearly 50 years old, and had been a printer and learned his trade in New York, where his brother now resides. When he came to realize that his days in this world would soon end he asked to be sent home. Dudley Evans wrote to the brother in New York, but received no reply. This fact seemed to grieve the old man. As the shadow of the dark valley fell upon him he whispered: "I would like to see home just once again." And the old printer was dead.

MILITARY WEDDING ATTRACTS SOCIETY

Marriage of Miss Strong to Major Bethel Social Event of the Season.

The military wedding of Miss Elizabeth Strong, daughter of Thomas N. Strong, and Major Walter A. Bethel, United States Army, judge-advocate of the department of the Columbia, at the First Presbyterian church last night was a brilliant event. Large American flags were draped about the choir loft and balconies. Palms formed the only other decoration. A large number of invited guests filled the auditorium. At 8 o'clock Edgar E. Courson began playing the organ, and as the hour of the ceremony approached swung into the Lohengrin bridal chorus and Mendelssohn's wedding march. The ushers were Captain Burkhardt, Captain Epochs, Lieutenant Lannoni, Lieutenant Tillotson, Lieutenant Wetherell and Lieutenant Taylor, all of the Nineteenth infantry; Captain Kenly of the artillery was the best man.

Miss Strong entered with her father, who performed the ceremony of giving the bride away. The marriage service was performed by Rev. Edgar P. Hill. The bride was pretty and girlish in a simple gown of chiffon crepe; her tulle veil was caught with a spray of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower of bride roses. Her sister, Miss Miriam Strong, was the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Marguerite LaBbe and Miss Nan Robertson. All were gowned in yellow embroidered net, and carried huge bouquets of lemon chrysanthemums. A wedding supper was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Strong, the bride party, Major and Mrs. Bethel left last night on an eastern trip, expecting to return about Christmas time. In February they will sail for Manila, where Major Bethel has been transferred for duty.

SHE SUFFERED LONG AND DIED A PAUPER

When Mrs. Emma Neyman died of cancer at the county hospital recently the last chapter of a life's tragedy was closed.

She had been in Portland since last June, having in some manner reached this city from Texas, where she had been sent by county aid in 1898. At that time Mrs. Neyman applied to the county court for aid in order to secure means to go to Fort Worth, Texas, where she said her husband and a son were ill. She was given a ticket and $10 in cash. This was the last the county officials heard of Mrs. Neyman until June, when she returned to Portland. She had been treated for some time by a devotee of a newly discovered patent medicine, who applied to the county commissioners for pay for her attendance upon the sick woman. The money was not granted. As she was in sore need a number of women residing in Albina purchased a little cottage for Mrs. Neyman, and for a while took care of her. She continued to grow worse, and it was decided to send her to the county hospital. Mrs. Neyman was 54 years of age.
