the baby and the mother's breast. So much lower than the company he keeps for his maudilin assumption of being higher, this pittless rancal blights the summer road as he maunders on he-tween the luxuriant before, where (to my thinking) eves the wild convolvulue, the rose, and sweethriar are the worke for his going by, and need time to re-cover from the taint of him in the sir." And Lover says somewhere that when he threw out a handful of small coin to the Naspolitan begrans the blind were the first to see it, the paralyzed to run for it, the maimed to pick if up, the naked to put it in their pockets, and the dumb to blaspheme their ill-luck in being out of the scramble. "As I was sitting." may Camerarius. "With some senators of Bruges before the gale of the senate house, a certain begran, with the most lamentable tears and gestures, implored our help upon the ground of his being cruely afflicted with an incurable disorder of a nature so shameful that he could not dipcover it to his fellow men. We were one shd all so moved by his tears and by his shuddering horror of his sceret com-plaint that we gave him amongst us a fair round sum. Indeed, we were so moved that we sent a doctor for our ac-quaintance, who happened to be passing, after the poor wretch to ascertain and prescribe for his disease. Overtaking him, not without difficulty, the doctor coeled to make a thorough examination of the patient. T can find nothing wrong with you,' he said at last. 'You are as sound as a bell.' 'Alasi doctor, which I am incurably afflicted goes desper than you can diagnose or winfee-ture. It is an evil that hath creat over in whole body, and passed through my veins and marrow; but it is considered ture. It is an evil that hath crept over my whole body, and passed through my veins and marrow; but it is considered such a disarnose that I dars not confess it. 'Not to a doctor? Burely you can confess it to a doctor? Burely you can only in confidence.' Then approaching the doctor, after looking this way and that to be secure of privacy, he shouted in his ear, 'Lasiness.'' The Scotch papers of the year 1817 reported at length the life and death of a notable begar, William Stevenson. About the year 1787 Stevenson and his wife separated upon the strange terms that the first of the two to propose a reunion was to pay the other $500 for-feit. The forfeit apparently was never incurred, as meither of them, as far as could be ascertained, ever saw the other feit. The forfeit apparently was never incurred, as neither of them, as far as could be ascertained, ever saw the other smin. Then Stevenson took to the road as a beggar, and lived for 30 years a free and jolly life, but at last, in his sight of death he sent for a baker and ordered 13 dogen burlai cakes, a large quantity of sugared bisouth, and an ample supply of wines and instructed him to make "a good, sound, dry, roomy, confortable coffin," laying the stress upon its comfortable grave" in a spe-cial spot in Riccarton churchyard. The old wines the sum-structed to find in a certain rag hidden in a cartain hole the money to defray all these expenses. Having thus relieved his mind of all anxiety as to his poi-tumous comfort, Stevenson died in peace. After his death were found in his garret two hage-one full of silver and the other of gold pieces—and a box containing bonds for various amounts, moluding one for $1,500-close upon containing bonds for various amounts, including one for $1,500-olose upon $5,000 in all. This was bequeathed to distant relatives, with the exception of $100 to the old woman who had attended him, and a large sum to provide a feast for all the beggars of Scotland who cared to come to see his body "lie in state." for all the beggars of Scotland who cared to come to see his body "lie in state." In the Gentleman's Magazine there is an interesting account of the coup d'etat by which Count Romford on Jan. 1, 1790, rid Munich of the swarming host of beggars which disgraced that city by their thievery, robbery and shameless debauchery. Having previously had constructed a large building and stocked it with the implemants of every trade, he ordered soldlers on Jan. 1, when the begins would be in full force in expec-tation of New Tear's gifts. to arrest every man, woman or child whe solic-itied alms. He arrested the first beggar with his own hand, and was so energet-leally seconded by the soldiery that be-fore night not a single one of the fra-ternity was to be met with in Munich. On the arrest of each he was taken to the town hall where, after the registry of his name, he was directed to repair the next day to the new workhouse pro-vided. In which food and employment would be found for him. It will be an encouragement to General Booth to learn from the Gentleman's Magazine that the success of the county was completa. "These heretofore miserable objects be-gan to cherish the idea of independences it withoed—to prefer industry to idle-mesa, and decency to filth and rags and the equalid wretchedness attendant to beggary." beggary."
