The road to Brody is the only line of transportation and is apparently well guarded. The Germans are neglecting Brody but Russia reports German forces moving upon Tarnopol as being checked along the branch of the railway from Lemberg which joins the main line.

If Tarnopol falls the Russians along the Dneister will be cut off from the Russians back at Brody. This means that part of the Russians from Lemberg will be compelled to retire into Bessarabia or else abandon that province, permitting the Germans to occupy it unopposed. This is seemingly the German objective. The Russian success in halting them is only temporary.
