TRUE TO HIS PARTY.

Some of the leading Republican papers of the state are opposed to the re-election of Senator Mitchell. This is a matter in which every citizen has a right to think and act as he pleases, to choose whom he pleases to support. No fault can be found with them for that. But the reason given by some of them for their opposition to Mitchell is open to criticism. They say Mitchell is not in accord with his party. He is not a gold man. He is not a good Republican. Let us see what this "holier than thou" sort of argument is:

The state Republican platform in 1890, when the legislature which elected Senator Mitchell was elected was not inimical to silver, while the platform of 1892 and 1894 were practically free silver platforms. Senator Mitchell, in his votes and his speeches, was in accord with the party of his state. He was not in the senate to voice solely his own views, but to express those of his party in his own state. This he did, and did ably. When the great mass of the party saw the danger threatening from the growing power of the silver faction, it called a halt, and in the national convention at St. Louis made the financial plank of international bimetalism. Senator Mitchell at once accepted it as the will of the party. He returned to Oregon, and on the stump delivered fifty-five speeches, in every one of which he expressed his fealty to his party, and that he stood, as he asked the members of his party in this state to stand, squarely on the St. Louis platform. Hundreds of his personal friends who believe in the doctrine of free silver, expressed their confidence in his judgment on the financial question by voting the Republican ticket, and we assert, without fear of contradiction by any intelligent person, that without Senator Mitchell's active and energetic work in the ranks of Bryan states. There is not a Republican in the state but will admit this.

The state platform of 1896, the platform on which the legislators now assembled at Salem were elected, was much more favorable to silver than the St. Louis platform. It was so broad that Ellis stood on one end of it as a free silver man, and Tom Tongue stood on the other as a gold man. It was so favorable to silver that that strict party organ, the Oregonian, which is so lachrymose about other people standing on the platform, bolted its party platform and organized an independent movement, with a solid gold plank as its basis and Judge Northrup as its avatar. It undertook to beat Ellis for congress, and came within a few votes of electing the Populist candidate. It embittered the friends of Ellis and Mitchell, and made the carrying of the state in November almost hopeless.

There never was a campaign in the state where the outlook at first was so gloomy; none where so gallant a battle was fought. All honor to the brave Republicans who proclaimed the doctrines of the party in every hamlet and in every school district. All honor to those who laid aside all bitterness over June and buried all personal feelings to achieve a victory in November; and among these let the work of Senator Mitchell be remembered with pride.

Mitchell may go down to defeat at the hands of an ungrateful party, but if he does, he will retire from the office which he has so ably filled, with the esteem of the people, who know that under all circumstances he has been true to them, to his party, to his friends and to himself.

DECIDED LONG AGO.

The secretary of the interior has decided the case of Rufus H. King against the Eastern Oregon Land Co., successors to The Dalles Military Wagon Road Co., in favor of King. Our contemporary lays considerable stress on Mr. Story's position in this case, and the remarkable coincidence that it is the same position as is taken by the secretary of the interior. The truth of the matter is that this question had already been passed upon by the secretary in the case of White and Ward against Higginbotham and Powell. Judge Bennett prepared an elaborate brief in that case, and that brief proved the conclusive argument.

The case of King against the Eastern Oregon Land Co. is exactly on all fours with the White and Ward case against Higginbotham and under the doctrine of stare decisis the decision in the King case was a foregone conclusion, just as the decision in all other of these cases must be. Judge Bennett stood the egg on end; anyone can do it now.
