Newspapers publish news at their peril. If they make misstatements concerning any one, both the eriminal and civil law may be invoked: the one to their punishment, and the other to compensating the injured party in damages. Public good demands the publication of public business: how it is managed, or mismanaged, and this regardless of whom it hurts. All the public needs to know. all anyone needs to know, is that the statements made in a paper are true. The fact that the injured party, if by local applications, as they cannot such, has his remedy in the courts, is sufficient protection to the public and that is by constitutional remedies. against any abuse of power on the Deafness is caused by an inflamed conpart of the press.
