GLORIOUS WORK AT SEVILLE.

The conduct of our forces in the fight near Seville was magnificent. Officers and men fought like veterans of many campaigns and hard-fought battles.

Every natural advantage lay with the Spaniards. The enemy was on his own ground; was concealed by deep thickets and entrenched behind earthworks; was acclimated to the oppressive heat of the tropics; was armed with the most modern rifles, and presumably had been under hot fire before.

On the opposing hand, our troops were weary from the exhaustion of hard marching through an enemy's country; they were exposed in open position, and were caught in a deadly ambush. Here were the conditions conducive to a frightful panic.

In his official report, General Wheeler puts our losses in killed, wounded and missing at about 100, or more than ten per cent of the forces engaged. This approximates the Union losses in some of the great battles of the civil war. When it is considered that these severe losses were sustained in an engagement lasting only two hours, the conduct of our gallant boys is marvelous. It demonstrates that the fighting spirit of the nation has not suffered during a third of a century of peace.

Officers and men alike carried themselves with superb courage and coolness. Captain Capron's death is unexcelled in history, and will live in deathless story. Mortally wounded, he asked support from brave Sergeant Bell, and continued firing until the revolver fell from his weakened grasp. Then his great soul composed itself for death, the last tender message was sent to wife and parent, a cheerful farewell was spoken to his faithful comrade, and the dying captain was borne away.

Colonel Roosevelt's dashing courage was glorious, and the conduct of every American soldier was above reproach. The nation will be profoundly moved by this splendid exhibition of fighting spirit.—Review.

THE BEGINNING AND THE END.

It is an impressive fact, in connection with the marked spirit of friendship which has more recently sprung up between the United States and England, that to America falls the providential lot of striking the coup de grace in a great struggle begun more than three centuries ago by England. Spain's downfall began with the destruction of her armada in 1588; that downfall was practically finished at the battle of Manila. "That Spain had fallen," with the destruction of her armada, "few of the world's statesmen saw then," says Green in his "History of the English People." "The defeat of the armada was the first of a series of defeats at the hands of the English and the Dutch. The naval supremacy of Spain was lost, and with it all was lost. An empire so widely scattered over the world, and whose dominions were parted by intervening nations, could only be held together by its command of the seas. One century saw Spain stripped of the bulk of the Netherlands, another of her possessions in Italy, a third of her dominions in the new world. But slowly as her empire broke, the cause of ruin was throughout the same. It was the loss of her maritime supremacy that robbed her of all, and her maritime supremacy was lost in the wreck of the armada."

This conviction is with the Spanish statesmen of today, and the thought of it embitters all Spain against England.

"Electric Bitters" is a good Alternative and Tonic. Acts directly on the stomach, liver and kidneys. Purifies the blood, cures pimples, blotches and boils, and gives a good complexion.
