The Oregon Trail

For those who grew up playing "The Oregon Trail" computer game, dysentery was serious business. In Portland Center Stage's production of "The Oregon Trail," written by Bekah Brunsetter and directed by Rose Riordan, two Janes traverse The Oregon Trail. "Now Jane" is playing the computer game in 1997; "Then Jane" is in a covered wagon in 1848. A judgey game show narrator, a domineering sister and two oxen try to corral the two Janes. Fate maneuvers them both to a conclusion that changes their lives and sends them to the end of the trail. The show opens on the U.S. Bank Main Stage on November 4, with previews beginning Oct. 29 and performances through Nov. 20. Portland Parks & Recreation Grass Athletic Fields Remain Closed Due to Weather

Portland Parks & Recreation (PP&R) announces that all city-owned athletic and ball fields will remain closed through at least Thursday due to safety concerns and saturated conditions related to heavy rain. The fields have been closed since Oct. 14.

The field closure impacts only grass fields at Portland Parks & Recreation sites, as well as events which PP&R had permitted at Portland

Public Schools facilities. The citywide closure does NOT impact synthetic turf fields, which are designed for all-weather play. On Thursday, October 20, PP&R will re-evaluate the grass fields and make a determination on if the closures need to be extended, with user safety in mind.

Wet conditions on fields citywide have left many PP&R athletic fields with standing water, mud, slippery turf, and other poor conditions that may impact athletes' safety. The conditions hamper the ability for PP&R maintenance crews to care for the fields. Portland Parks & Recreation turf experts stressed the importance of preserving the grass at this time so that fall sports seasons can be completed on those fields in the coming weeks.

All people who have been granted permits for events on PP&R athletic and ball fields will have their money refunded.

Meals on Wheels People Seeks 1,200 Volunteers for Donate Dinner Campaign Nov. 19-23

Meals on Wheels People is recruiting 1,200 volunteers to help distribute cards to holiday shoppers at independent grocers as part of their Donate Dinner campaign the five days before Thanksgiving, Nov. 19-23. Donate Dinner provides shoppers the opportunity to "donate dinner to a homebound senior" when they shop for their Thanksgiving meal. Last year shoppers donated $180,000.

Volunteers greet customers and hand them a card that explains how they can "donate dinner" when they check out. Each volunteer shift is only two hours and available from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. at 30 different locations throughout the greater Portland-Vancouver metro area.

For a complete list of participating stores or to register for a volunteer shift, visit DonateDinner.org or call Kirsten at (503) 953-8124.
