been in the lower House. No man knew is by this time slightly acquainted with patches—is no doubt erroneous. the Polphonian method. Dolph is good at introducing bills; if there is no escape he will even assist in passing them; but if they are likely to do the corporations for which he is the attorney any injury, he will take care that they are not carried into effect. The President is right; it won't do to take chances on Dolph. Because he has introduced a bill-at the instruction of the people of Oregon-is no forfeited. We remember pretty well last year's experience with the appropriation for the Cascade locks.

"Tag prohibition vote is what may be termed an unknown factor in politics. What effect it will have upon the two old parties, as to the relative number of votes they will draw from each, is an interesting and important question. There is no doubt that the fime will come when this live and keep voting for a few years yet. third party will be powerful, and parties The value of a good brick or stone to incorporate a prohibition plank in their platforms. In the meantime, no one questions but that the party, in its temperance work, is doing a great deal of

This is more sensible and reasonable talk than that constantly indulged in by the Salem Statesman, and papers of that sort, who can find nothing but opprobrious epithets to heap upon prohibitionists, simply because some of them have chosen to vote with the other parties.

containing this:

"Forth from its sheltered nook of sunny grass, innocent, solden cathe as the dawn. The Spring's first ducate ion shows its trustful face."

The same day the worst blizzard ever experienced burst upon that region, and another paper remarked: "The sympathies of the metropolis went out to that same dandelion vesterday."

The dandellon ought to have been born out in Oregon, where its trust would not have been thus cruelly betrayed.

The Astoria Pioneer, the prize newspaper thief of America, and the champion liar of the world, prints entire the Eas; OREGONIAN's article entitled "Ants and Men," under the title of "Our Amday Sermon," without any credit, of course, that it was stolen by us from the "Wash- ate and unalterable. Perhaps he is wise. ington View," or some other imaginary publication. We have dropped the Pioneer from our exchange list. We do not want any dealings with sneak-thieves.

Hox. Jour BURNETT's proposition to pay farmers a bounty on grain raised is proper, consistent, just, reasonable, and right, if the protection theory is correct. The farmers are over-taxed to protect the manufacturers and capitalists; now let the manufacturers and capitalists pay taxes out of their profits to protect the farmers. Turn about is fair play. Into Ten Millions of Assets. Two Millions what an absurd position does the protection theory, logically carried out, lead one.

The first State election of the year will not occur in Oregon, as many suppose, but in Rhode Island, on April 4th.

BADEAU, replying to Fred Grant's statement recently published, alleges that he was of great assistance and value to

"I discussed his statements and the advisability of his expressions of opinion, and often persuaded him to change the one or modify the other. I broke up sentences; I softened or hightened the effect, I corrected grammar, and all often. sentences; I softeness of the softeness of the knowledge and sanction of General Grant. I always sought to preserve his simplicity and directness and even ruggedness of language; never to betray my gedness book, or of treating a theme so as to lead up to a point, or to make a complete picture of arguments. But the book could not have been made what it is without me. There was no one else who had both my peculiar knowledge of the theme and the literary quality."

Very likely this is true. It sounds plausible. Bade,co is celebrated chiefly as a vain fellow, or very small calibre, except in the way of dress and dudity. Yet while he was an insufferably small man compared to Grant, he was able to do about what he says he did, and over three inches, in both, per inch per 1.75 not to object to paying the debt, Grant's son-the partner of Ward-ought

The fellow in Washington who makes up or colors the dispatches sent to the Oregonian for Oregon papers, ought to have a "soft thing" about now.
