Emperor William announced he would not be "at home" when Oom Paul called. This announcement on the part of Emperor Bill caused Grandmother Victoria to smile all over her over-fed face when she heard it.

There is going to be a reduction of the war tax. The reduction of the tax is said to have occurred some time ago, but the tax always remains with us longer than the war and between the two it is difficult to decide which is preferable.

With the opening of congress President McKinley addressed it with a message of about 15,000 words. With the opening of parliament Queen Victoria's "speech from the throne" consisted of about twenty-five words. The president was a little more fulsome than usual and the queen less so.

The czar of Russia will recover from his late severe spell of sickness in spite of the treatment of sixteen or more of specialists and as many doctors of every nationality. The czar is said to be a frail man even when he is in normal health, and this adds to the miraculousness of his escape.

Senator Hanna is quoted as saying that "this is too big a country to have any little men get in the way of large movements for the benefit of all the people." Senator Hanna had in view those who oppose his ship subsidy bill when he made this remark. That is a very "large movement" but not for the people.

"We will oppose that which is bad and vote for that which is good," is the way the minority leader in congress defines the democratic policy for the present short session of the national legislative body. Such an attitude is becoming to a democratic party at all times. The next thing to carrying on good government is to assist others to carry it on.

Chicago is so deep in debt that she cannot issue any more bonds. Great Britain is making a rush for about the same position by spending something like $75,000,000 a week for war, the money for which she obtains by borrowing. Now the leading financial paper of the empire is demanding that peace be made on most any honorable terms. Those who go a borrowing go a sorrowing.

The East Oregonian has been accused of keeping company with Ambrose Bierce, to the extent of quoting and endorsing a recent utterance of his. The East Oregonian has no apologies to offer for the company it keeps. It simply prefers it to that of those who are inclined to imagine they are patriotic because they are so constituted that they can change their politics with every passing breeze, with the hope of "raising the wind" as time passes. There are some people who shout for the purpose of attracting attention to themselves and who mistake a peacock strut for military valor, and it is such as these who are liable to "bust," with indignation at least, when someone, figuratively speaking, sticks a pin into their fuss and feather creations or exposes some of their inflated and exaggerated claims, and many such have come from the Philippines since we entered into the business of "killing niggers" because they would not give up their country and independence without asking any questions or inquiring into the details.

The demand that the president have the power to double the army whenever he thinks it necessary, without having first to be given the consent of congress, smacks just a little of imperialism. With this power given to some man, who may sit in the presidential chair, he could make and declare Borne. Of this man's house Heine wrote:

 "I found in his saloon such a menagerie of people as can hardly be found in the Jardin des Plantes (the Paris Zoological Garden). In the background several polar bears were crouching, who smoked and hardly ever spoke, except to growl out now and then a real Fatherland 'donner wetter' in a deep bass voice. Near them was squatting a Polish wolf, in a real cap, who occasionally yelped out a silly, wild remark in a hoarse tone. There, too, I found a French monkey, one of the most hideous creatures I ever saw. He kept up a series of grinnaces, each of which seemed more lovely than the last," etc.

If Heine's polar bears and monkey had studied themselves, as we advise you to study yourself, they might have escaped the sarcasm of the starkest tongue born in or out of Germany. Hearst's Chicago American.

THE UNSEEN UNIVERSE IS REAL.

It is astonishing how recent advances in astronomy are plunging us deep into the invisible universe. It has become evident that the heavens are more filled with unseen than with seen things. This leads additional and piquant interest to the fact that our solar system is traveling at mad speed through space, the Southern stars closing in behind it and the Northern stars persistently opening out before it as it rushes nearer to them. One cannot help wondering what may lie undetected, because unseen, in our pathway.

By unseen things is here meant, not phenomena too distant to be visible, but objects which are unseen because they give off no form of radiation that affects our eyes. Such objects may be comparatively near by without revealing their presence to our sense of sight.

It is clear that something equivalent to, if not identical with, the mysterious Roentgen rays comes to us from celestial space, emanating from the stars. Shadow photographs made with the sunbeams are sufficient to prove this. If the sun pours forth "invisible light" his brother stars, the stars, do so too, and some of them evidently "shine brighter," if I may use so self-contradictory a phrase, by their invisible rays.

For proof of that statement we need only look at the photographs recently taken of the celebrated Ring Nebula in Lyra. In the center of that strange gauze-like ring is an exceedingly faint star. In a few telescopes of enormous power that star can just be glimpsed. But in a photograph, with scarcely any magnification, the star appears as a most conspicuous phenomenon. Why does it impart its picture so boldly when its light is so faint? Perhaps because it bears a resemblance to a gigantic Crookes tube, and is essentially an "electric star," whose major radiation differs from that of our sun.

It only requires another step in the same direction to convince us that there are in the heavens objects which radiate no light at all, but which nevertheless may be continually pouring upon us invisible waves the existence of which can be detected by modern photographic methods. The recent detection by powerful photographic telescopes of thousands of invisible nebulae scattered over the heavens shows what an infinite world of discovery lies this way.

The unseen universe, formerly the subject of metaphysical discussion, becomes real to us, and the means of handling its phenomena with some of the certainty with which we have dealt with visible things are to come into our hands.

WHAT ANIMAL CONTROLS YOU?

Of all animals upon earth man came last.

All of earth's animal creations are bound up in man.

As to the first statement there is no difference of opinion.

The Bible and Darwin agree that man was created last of all the animals.

Very superficial observation will convince you that man contains in his mental make-up all of the "inferior" animals, or at least a great many of them.

You, Mr. Jones, or Smith, who read this are in your single self a sort of synthesis of the entire animal creation.

If you could be divided into your component animal parts, there would be a menagerie in your house and you, Smith or Jones, would be missing. That thing we call a soul would be floating around impalpable, looking for its house to live in.

Of course you can see the animal make-up in your neighbor more readily than in yourself.

How do men describe each other? Do they not speak as follows, and mean exactly what they say:
 "He is as sly as a fox."
 "He eats like a pig."
 "He has dog-like faithfulness."
 "He is as brave as a lion."
 "He is as treacherous as a snake."
 "He was as hungry as a wolf," etc.

Our good and our bad qualities alike are mapped out in our humble relations.

The horse stands for ambition, which strives and suffers in silence. The dog represents friendship, which suffers and sacrifices much, but whines loudly when injured.

We have no doubt that of the twelve passions which enter into Fourier's complex analysis of man each has its prototype in some animal.

To rebel at the animal combination which makes up a man would be folly. The Maker of us all, from ants to anti-imperialists, naturally gathered together the various parts in lower animal form before finishing the work in man.

A harmoniously balanced mixture of all the animals is calculated undoubtedly to produce the perfect man.

Therefore, study your animal make-up. Analyze honestly and intelligently the so-called "lower" creatures from which you derive your mental characteristics. If you have not yet done so, study at once some good work on embryology, and learn with amazement and awe of your marvelous pre-natal transformations.

Then do your best to control the menagerie that is at work in your mind.

Stupor Mr. Pig, if he is too prominent. Circumvent Mr. Fox. If he tries to rule you and make of you a mere running machine. Do not let your Old Dog Tray qualities of friendship lead to your being made a tool of.

In short, study carefully the animal qualities that make up your temperament and prove in your own person the falseness of Napoleon's irritating statement that a man's temperament can never be changed by himself.

It may interest you to note that when man becomes insane the fact is at once made apparent that his mind, dethroned, had acted as the savage ruler of a menagerie. Many men imagine themselves animals of one sort or another. Nearly all of them display the grossest animal qualities, once their mind is deranged. Women of the greatest refinement sink into dreadful animalism when insane.

Heine tells of a constable who, in his boyhood, raised his native city. One fine day "this constable suddenly went crazy" and thereupon he began to roar like a lion or squall like a cat." Heine remarks with calculated naivete: "We little boys were greatly delighted at the old fellow, and trooped yelling after him, until he was carried off to a mad house."

There is, by the way, much of the natural animal in "little boys." It takes years to make a fairly reasonable creature of a young human. For that reason many ignorant parents are foolishly distressed at juvenile displays of animalism, which are perfectly natural.

The same Heine, whose writings you ought not to neglect, describes beautifully a human menagerie. We'll quote that, and then let you off for the day. Heine was living in Paris in the forties and used to visit a curious revolutionary freak named Ludwig

Life at Stake

Somewhere in the world life is at stake every minute of the day. Right at our own doors, perhaps, is going on a struggle as grim and fierce as any fight or fight on record. You hear the hollow tearing cough; see the ooze of blood which tells of the wounded lungs; mark the emaciated body and hectic cheek, and know a life is at stake.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has saved many a life in just such a crisis. It cures obstinate, deep-seated coughs, stops the hemorrhage, strengthens "weak" lungs, and restores the emaciated body to its normal weight and strength.

There is no alcohol in the "Discovery," and it is absolutely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

It desire to send you this brief, unadorned testimonial, writes Key Joseph H. Pesterman, Barium Springs, Iredell Co., N. C. "In 1896 one of my daughters was suffering from a severe cough, hectic fever, wasting of flesh and other symptoms of diseased lungs. I promptly gave her Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with gratifying success, and she now enjoys excellent health. This experience caused me to recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to my neighbors, who, without exception, used them with favorable results."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only, or if cloth bound volume is desired send 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
