anecdote, fact and legend among the memories of men yet living, who wrought the foundations of our beloved state? Who will write Oregon history? Strangers? Who will preserve our narratives? It must be done by Western hand and pen. It must be rescued while it yet lives in the hearts and memories of the pioneers. Let every Oregonian turn historian. Make public sentiment and patriotic agencies to aid your work. Collect the old stories. Their charm will be unrivalled. Write sketches of adventure which you have listened to and add your activity to the work of making our history a part of our pride! In this special direction Mrs. Dye, of Oregon City, has issued a little volume of "Oregon Stories," full of a native charm and beauty. This charming little book is published by the Whiteaker, Ray company, San Francisco, and sold at any book store.

AN IDEA, AND WHAT CAME OF IT.

The Oregon Historical society proposes a commemorative celebration at Portland, in 1905, of the centennial anniversary of the Lewis and Clarke expedition to the Pacific coast. Invitation will be extended to the governors of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming to share in the interesting historical festival.

The reflection is fascinating that every notable and great achievement in the world's history sprang from an idea born in the mind of one person. The fact is interesting that the thought which led up to the Lewis and Clarke expedition, and to which are traceable the history and growth and romance of the Pacific northwest, came into the fertile mind of Jefferson when that eminent statesman was serving as United States minister to France.

"Thomas Jefferson," says one historian, "was the father of United States explorations. While lesser minds were absorbed in proximate events, his profound sagacity penetrated forests, and sought to reveal the extent and resources of the new nation. And chief among the incidents which aroused in him a more than ordinary interest in the subject was the appearance, in 1780, at the United States legation in Paris, while Jefferson was minister to France, of that most remarkable man, John Ledyard of Connecticut."

Ledyard was with Captain Cook in his voyage to the Pacific, and had been the first in Europe or America to propose a trading voyage to the north-west coast. And now in Paris, painting for fresh adventures, he inspired in that great American the noble dream of exploration that was to aid an empire to the young republic.

Returning in 1789 to the United States, the thought grew upon Jefferson, and in 1792, while secretary of state, he proposed to the American Philosophical society that some competent person be engaged to ascend the Missouri river, cross the Stony mountains, and follow a western river to the sea. The plan was attempted, but was not carried to consummation. Jefferson, however, never lost sight of his favorite project, and when he entered the White House in 1801, the idea developed into the stupendous diplomacy which gave us Louisiana, and put our western border in contact with the distant Pacific northwest, the mysterious No Man's Land of the Oregon. But Jefferson was resolved that it should not long continue as No Man's Land, and in a confidential message of January 18, 1803, he urged congress to authorize a military expedition across the continent. The measure was sanctioned by congress, and the Lewis and Clarke expedition followed.

Besides 14 United States soldiers, the party included nine young Kentuckians, two French voyageurs, a hunter, an interpreter, and a negro servant of Captain Clarke. It passed the winter of 1803-4 at the mouth of the Missouri. In the spring of 1804, it was reinforced by a detail of six soldiers under a corporal, with nine boats, and proceeded by leisurely stages up the Missouri river. It went into winter quarters in October, in the country of the Mandans.

In the spring of 1805, the party pushed its toilsome way up the Missouri, crossed the Rocky mountains, and after enduring severe hardships and encountering innumerable perils, followed a tributary of the Clearwater, and after that the larger stream to its confluence with the Snake, passed down the Snake river to the Columbia, and thence down the great river of the west, until, on November 7, 1805, they beheld to their great joy the horizon line of the Pacific ocean.

Space will not permit a detailed account of the party's explorations. It passed the winter of 1805-6 near the Columbia's mouth, the spot selected for the fort being about 200 yards from the bank of Lewis river, near its entrance into the bay, on the Clatsop or Oregon shore.

The winter was passed in hunting for food, making treaties with the surrounding tribes, and distributing medals and certificates of kindness to the leading chiefs. Before starting on the long return journey, Lewis and Clarke posted this notice in the fort:

"The object of this is, that through the medium of some civilized person, who may see the same, it may be made known to the world, that the party consisting of the persons whose names are herewith annexed, and who were sent out by the government of the United States to explore the interior of the continent of North America, did penetrate the same by the way of the Missouri and Columbia rivers, to the discharge of the latter into the Pacific ocean, where they arrived on the 14th day of November, 1805, and departed the 23rd day of March, 1806, by the same route by which they had come out."

The assertion is occasionally heard that Lewis and Clarke claimed the Pacific northwest as territory of the United States, but is not well founded. The time was not yet opportune for so bold and sweeping a claim, and its advancement then would have alarmed the powers of Europe, and might have lost us the great empire which is now our noble heritage.

There is strange fascination in reflecting on what might have been. We see the Oregon country by a narrow margin, with nothing to spare in statecraft and diplomacy. If Jefferson had not conceived the great idea, nurtured it in his fertile mind, and advanced it to the point of daring action, history might record a very different story. Ledyard had not met our ambassador at Paris, nor poured into his ready ear the ambitious plan of northwestern civilization and conquest, a different purpose might have controlled the lofty spirit of Jefferson. The red ensign of Britain might wave where now floats to the free breeze the Stars and Stripes of our glorious Union.—Spokesman-Examiner.

HERPICIDE

Herpicide is the chief adjunct of beauty, it is how placed with the reach of every eye. It is a scientific discovery that effectively destroys the microbes responsible for all scalp diseases.

It not only makes dandruff and falling hair things of the past, but invigorates the scalp, making a soft, thick growth to supplant the old and brittle one. Here is what one lady writes:

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26, '92.

My hair was coming out very freely, and I was getting very bald. I had used many remedies, but they had no effect. I was so miserable that I had to stop work, and I was getting very thin. I was so miserable that I had to stop work, and I was getting very thin. I was so miserable that I had to stop work, and I was getting very thin.

BAD COLDS

Nothing is so sure to bring on colds as to have to be endured. MENDEL'S DYNAMIC TABLETS (quilled dynamite from their energy) crowd a week's excess of colds into twelve hours and about the worst of colds over night.

"It was the worst case of grip I ever had. A half dozen friends had gone away. Still I hung on. I had the DYNAMIC TABLETS. To my surprise they stopped both cold and cough the first night. I endorse and recommend them to the people." BARCLAY HENLEY, ex-Member Congress and Attorney, 202 Sanson street, San Francisco, Aug. 6, '90.

"Winter colds have always been serious things to me. They are hard and stay for months. But they were stopped suddenly by MENDEL'S DYNAMIC TABLETS. Both cough and cold disappeared in a couple of days. Nothing else does this for me." MRS. MARY L. HODGINS, 1140 Mission St., San Francisco, Aug. 6, '90.

"I had been seven days in bed when MENDEL'S DYNAMIC TABLETS were used. That is how I feel now. They stop colds without opium. I took a dozen, and was up and about when I went to work." H. L. VAN WINKLE, Captain, 207 Washington Street, San Francisco. August 10, 1898.

Sent postpaid for 25 cents in stamps by INLAND DRUG CO., 224 Washington Street, San Francisco. Also sold by our local agent, ROEMPPEN'S PHARMACY.
