CIRCUS DAY IN PENDLETON

THE STREET PARADE WAS AN EXCELLENT ONE.

The Pan-American Show Highly Recommended by the Portland Papers, Where Exhibitions Were Given Monday.

The great Pan-American shows are now in town and from early this morning until after the street parade this afternoon, the streets were packed and jammed with men, women and children, who came from the country and their homes in town to see the parade and the sights. The show came in with its special train at 7 o'clock this morning, and the circus crews immediately began to unload and take their paraphernalia to the site of the performance. By 8 o'clock, people began to flock into town and by the middle of the forenoon it was almost impossible to pass up or down the main streets.

The parade started at 12:15 from the tents at the west end of Alta street, and passed up Alta to the court house, crossed over to Court street and passed down Court to Main, then back to Alta, and down to the place of starting. The parade was a good one, and the many wagons, loaded with the animals, were drawn by white horses. The band wagon was in the lead and the musicians discoursed excellent music for the entertainment of the people. The parade was not one of those gorgeous affairs that usually is accompanied by fakirs and grafters, but was a good, clean aggregation. Immediately after reaching the show ground the crowd was treated to a free high dive, from the top of a ladder 100 feet in the air.

Not only does the great Pan-American shows commend themselves to the public by their fine performances and high-class work in the tents, but are free from any of the tough element that usually characterizes traveling circuses. Not a bit of rough talk or swearing is permitted by any of the employees while at work preparing for the performances and the "skin" game or "sure thing" man is noticeable by his absence. These shows give a fine performance that is well worth the money. Everything is neat and clean both on the inside and outside. The afternoon performance commenced at 2 o'clock and the evening performance will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

What Portland Paper Says.

The Portland Oregonian, in speaking of the Pan-American shows after they left Portland, which exhibit in Pendleton today, said:

The Pan-American Shows opened their season in Portland Monday, showing on the circus grounds at Twentieth and Savier streets to two good houses. The show is surprisingly good throughout. The collection of animals, headed by Rajah, the largest elephant in the world, is well selected, and every animal is a splendid specimen of its kind, the horses and ponies are unusually beautiful, and the performance is of a kind that keeps the interest at a high pitch from first to last. In every department the circus is free from the ordinary accompaniments. The tickets are sold from but one window, and there are no shell games or other evidences of "graft" to be seen about the grounds.

The feature of the performance is the act of Anna Cook, a somersault rider who does tricks that take the breath away from those who witness them, and keep their hearts in their mouths all the time. Kitty Cook, a four and six-horse rider does work usually beyond the range of an equestrienne, keeping perfect control of her galloping mounts, and riding with much grace and ease. Professor Leon's trained elephants show what they have learned during the winter in a highly satisfactory manner, and prove that they are good for something else besides a spectacle in the menagerie. The Leon sisters on the slack wire, made a hit all by themselves. The Morrati sisters in a flying return trapeze act give a performance as fascinating as it is dangerous, and the La Rowe family in pyramids and posing contribute a very clever turn. There are many other features—enough, in fact, to keep two rings going for over an hour and a half—and there is not a slow act in either ring. The riding is especially clever and the horses are as fine and spirited. A bunch of clowns and particularly good band supply two features without which a circus is no circus at all.

The performance in the main tent concludes with a lively and exciting hippodrome race.

In the menagerie are Rajah, the mammoth elephant, who is said to be the tallest in the world, two other big brutes that are fond of peanuts and have flapping ears, seven lions, two of which are splendid fellows; a black bear cub about as big as a foot ball, a pair of handsome leopards, a big black bear, a team of Filipino cattle with abbreviated legs, a horrible hyena and half a dozen or more cages of animals, including monkeys, parquets, cockatoos, etc. Altogether, the show is a good one and will undoubtedly do a big business on the road this season.

Death of J. Sterling Morton. Hon. J. Sterling Morton, former secretary of agriculture, died on Sunday, at Lake Forest, near Chicago, at the home of his son, Mark Morton. For several weeks Mr. Morton has been gradually sinking. The nature of his sickness had not been determined and a week ago he was brought from his home at Nebraska City, Neb., to Lake Forest for medical attention. The change brought no improvement and he declined gradually till death came. His age was 70 years. The interment will take place at Nebraska City, Nebraska. Mr. Morton was founder of "Arbor Day" and a man of sterling worth and integrity. He was always a stalwart democrat.

LIFE INSURANCE CASE.

Although Man Refused Policy, He Was Liable on the Note He Gave for It.

Walla Walla, April 30.—When a man signs a note given with an application for life insurance he must pay the amount specified was the verdict of a jury yesterday in Justice Glassford's court in this city. The case was on in which W. M. Fleming secured an application for insurance in the Equitable company and took a note for the first year's premium. The policy was delivered and refused by H. G. Kelly, the applicant upon some pretext. Suit was then brought to collect the premium note, and a jury found for the full amount stipulated in the note. Kelly claimed that he refused to accept the policy and hence was not liable, that the representations of the agent had not been carried out and hence he refused to pay the note.
