VERY FEW HOBOES

PENDLETON IS FREE FROM IDLERS AND TRAMPS.

Begging and Pilfering is Almost Unknown This Winter—Work Plentiful in the Inland Empire—Epidemic of Vagrancy in Some Parts of Oregon.

The city of Pendleton is singularly free from "hoboes" this winter. The number of genuine tramps passing through here and making headquarters on the outskirts of town is less now than for several years before.

Petty pilfering and begging is wholly unknown this winter so far as can be learned and very few suspicious looking specimens are to be seen on the streets.

Usually a band collects on the river near the railroad bridge, and annoys the neighborhood by carousing and begging, until dispersed, but the old camp has been deserted most of the winter.

Trainmen report very few tramps or workmen traveling by the usual box car and break beam pass.

Most of the men who are passing through the country seem to be warmly clad and all have sufficient money to pay for meals.

The severe weather of the mountain districts drives the tramps south to spend the "holidays" in sunshine. Wardrobes cost more than the usual tie pass, so for the sake of economy, the idler goes where elaborate wardrobes are not needed.

Grants Pass and Salem have complained for months of the presence of hoboes and burglars. Many petty crimes have been committed and a loud outcry has been made by the press against the prevailing vagrancy and "hoboism."

There is absolutely no reason for men to be idle in Eastern Oregon, even during the winter season. The wood men of the Blue mountains have advertised for help, the sheepmen employ an army of feeders, herders and helpers on the great ranches of the Inland Empire, and the mines of Eastern Oregon constantly need more men than they can get.

O. R. & N. IMPROVEMENTS.

New Well at Baker City—4000 Feet of Pipe Laid and New Engine Placed.

O. E. Hult, superintendent of the water service on the O. R. & N. has just completed some extensive improvements in the company water plant at Baker City.

A well 22 feet deep and 16 feet in diameter was completed some time ago. Over 4000 feet of four-inch pipe has just been laid, reaching from the well to the water tank near the depot. A new six-horse power gasoline engine has just been placed in position and the plant at that point is now in first-class condition.

The company has had some trouble with the water supply at Baker City in the past, but the well just completed is favorably located and has every appearance of being inexhaustible.

Perhaps at no point on the entire system is there more water used than at Baker City. All eastbound trains take water there and all westbound freight trains. The water supplied from the old well contained a great amount of alkali, and caused locomotive boilers to foam very badly. Every time it was possible to pass the Baker City tank by, engineers were glad to do so.

However the quality of water in the new well is much better and the company feels that the trouble heretofore experienced will be removed.

NECKLACE OF A CHIEF.

Splendid Indian Curio in the Hands of Col. F. J. Parker.

One of the finest Indian relics ever exhibited in Portland is being shown about the hotel lobbies by Col. Frank J. Parker, head of the Lewis and Clark Commission for the state of Washington, who has been in this city for some time. It is a necklace made from bears' claws, seals' teeth, elks' teeth, the finest of beads and pretty colored pebbles. The necklace is valued at $50 by Mr. Parker, but he would not part with it for many times that amount. He found it in an open Indian grave which he discovered during a recent trip into the Idaho country.

"In a short time," said Col. Parker today to a reporter for The Journal, "I intend making a trip down into Lincoln county, where a friend of mine has just written me he has found a fine bunch of graves. We will search them for relics."

a cabinet that I consider to be one of the finest in existence. It is strictly a pioneer exhibit, and contains Indian trophies and relics as well as mineral specimens. I intend to have it on display at the Lewis and Clarke fair."

Speaking of the splendid necklace which he now has with him, the Colonel said:

"I did not find it all together. Of course it was all in one grave, but the string on which it had been originally was rotten with age and the fine collection of beads and other pretty things was rather scattered. I got it together and have it on wire now, so there is no danger of any of it being lost."

The necklace is about five feet in length and the different ornaments of which it is composed alternate. Some of the teeth are carved in rude fashion to resemble sea lions, and age shows on every article that goes to make up the whole.

Those who saw Col. Parker's necklace say it is fit to be entered in the famous collection of Dr. R. E. Stewart, the Goldendale, Wash., curio collector.
