Gone to the Okanogan.
Harry Piltier has gone into the Okanogan country, having a winter's work ahead at tool sharpening. Mr. Piltier has been visiting old friends in the southern part of the county, and a few days ago returned from the Greenhorn district. He reports laborers, even skilled labor, as over-abundant there, and took up a standing offer to go into the Okanogan. He preferred, for climatic reasons, to remain in this part of the country.

When Miss Alice B. Welles, sponsor for the battleship Connecticut, threw the bottle of champagne against the side of the vessel in christening it, on Thursday, the bottle failed to break and the omen was taken as unfavorable by the superstitious. A workman standing near, seized the unbroken bottle and smashed it to atoms against the ship just as she was sinking into the water, thus preventing her from being launched under a bad omen.

And in the meantime the Bishop Potter saloon is being well advertised by the temperance organizations.
Russia has just ordered 11 torpedo boat destroyers from a French company.

WONDERFUL BRIDGE

NATURE ACCOMPLISHES
A GREAT FEAT IN UTAH.

Solid Sand-stone Arch Three Hundred Thirty-Five Feet Between the Walls of the Canyon and Over a Gorge Three Hundred Fifty-Seven Feet Deep—Has a Longer Span Than Any Masonry Bridge in America.

Here in Utah, across a canyon measuring 335 feet seven inches from wall to wall, nature has thrown a splendid arch of solid sandstone, sixty feet thick in the central part and 40 feet wide, leaving underneath it a clear opening of 357 feet in perpendicular height. The lateral walls of the arch rise perpendicularly nearly to the top of the bridge, when they flare suddenly outward, giving the effect of an immense coping or cornice overhanging the main structure 15 or 20 feet on each side, and extending with the greatest regularity and symmetry the whole length of the bridge. A large rounded butte at the edge of the canyon wall seems partly to obstruct the approach to the bridge at one end.

Here again the curving walls of the canyon and the impossibility of bringing the whole of the great structure into the narrow field of the camera, except from distant points of view, render photographs unsatisfactory. But the lightness and grace of the arch is brought out by the partial view which Long obtained by climbing far up the canyon wall and at some risk crawling out on an overhanging shelf.

The majestic proportions of this bridge, however, may be partly realized by a few comparisons. Thus its height is more than twice as great as those of the famous natural bridges of Virginia. Its buttresses are 118 feet farther apart than those of the celebrated masonry arch in the District of Columbia, known as Cabin John Bridge, a few miles from Washington city, which has the greatest span of any masonry bridge on this continent.

This bridge would overspan the capitol at Washington and clear the top of the dome by 51 feet. And if the loftiest tree in the Calaveras groves of giant sequoia in California stood in the bottom of the canyon, its topmost bough would lack 32 feet of reaching the under side of the arch.

This bridge is of light or very light sandstone, and, as in the case of the Caroline, filaments of green and orange-tinted lichens run here and there over the mighty buttresses and along the sheltered crevices under the lofty cornice, giving warmth and color to the wonderful picture.

Forest fires raging in the Bitter Root mountains in Montana, have slaughtered many wild animals of all kinds, within the past week. The animals' carcasses have been found where they took refuge on cliffs and in heavy thickets.
