BIG YALE-HARVARD RACES TOMORROW

New London, Conn., June 24.—Once more the abounding lethargy of this old city is being shattered into fragments and dissipated to the four winds or heaven by the enthusiastic hosts of John Harvard and Eli Yale, who have already virtually taken possession of the town, in advance of the annual struggle on the Thames between the oarsmen of the rival universities. While the big crowd will not arrive until tomorrow, owing to the commencement festivities in New Haven and Cambridge today, there are already a sufficient number of students here to obviate any possibility of peaceful sleep tonight for the staid townsmen of New London. All of the streets are decorated in crimson and blue, the merchants and citizens contributing largely to the color scheme and for the most part impartially. Adherents of Yale appear to be the most conspicuous and are making the blaziest noise, due to the nearness to New Haven and the supremacy of Yale students and alumni in Connecticut. The largest crowd that ever witnessed the American regatta is confidently predicted.

Final Practice Today.
Each crew engaged in final practice today and the husky athletes comprising the rival crews showed up in the best of condition. All the "dope" points to a repetition of last year's historic struggle, when Yale snatched the season's dual aquatic honors from Harvard after a contest so close and bitterly contested from start to finish that almost equal glory was accorded by the crowds to both winners and losers. While there will probably be the usual number of wagers on the result, the admirers of neither crew are offering tempting odds.

Arrangements for an observation train along the river, to accommodate the spectators, have been completed and every effort will be made by the railway officials to supply accommodations for all who desire to witness the struggle.

The schedule for the day is almost the same as in the past, the minor events to be rowed in the forenoon and the big event of the day late in the afternoon. Last year the varsity race was not rowed until 7 o'clock owing to the rough condition of the water. The official schedule is as follows:

1. The varsity four-oar race will be started at 10 a. m. sharp, at the Navy Yard and rowed down stream, finishing at the railroad bridge.
2. The freshman eight-oared race will be started as soon as practicable after the finish of the varsity four-oar race and will be rowed down stream, starting at the Navy Yard and finish at the bridge.
3. The university race will be started at the railroad bridge at 5:30 p. m. and will be rowed up stream to the beginning of the four-mile course.
4. Should it be necessary to postpone the freshman and four-oared races (if the university race is rowed on time), they will be rowed up stream immediately after the university race, from the Navy Yard to the beginning of the four-mile course.

Agreements.
(c) It is mutually agreed that the varsity race will be rowed on time, weather permitting, regardless of any postponement of the other two races.

COFFEE
is perishable, it ought to be kept in tight packages, not exposed to air.

(d) Should a disagreement arise between the varsity captains as to the time of rowing the races, the power of deciding shall be vested in the referee. It is further understood that both captains agreeing their word shall be final.

(e) Both captains agree that unless otherwise ordered by the referee, they will leave their respective floats in suitable time to be ready to start at the time agreed upon.

(f) Should it be necessary to postpone the varsity race from 5:30 p. m. it shall be rowed up stream any time up to 7 p. m.

(g) Should it be necessary to postpone any or all of the races until the next day, the varsity race shall be rowed down stream at 10 a. m. from the beginning of the four-mile course to the railroad bridge, and the freshman and four-oared races, if postponed, shall be rowed down stream immediately after the varsity race, from the Navy Yard to the railroad bridge.

Yale and Harvard eights have rowed 41 races, beginning in 1852 on Lake Winnepesaukee, at two miles. Of the 41 races Yale has won 23, while Harvard has 18 victories to her credit. In 1855 the course was changed to Springfield and lengthened to three miles. For nine years Lake Quinsigamond was the scene of the contests. In 1865 this course was abandoned, and in the following year the crews met at Lake Saltonstall. After an interval of seven years the crews in 1876 returned to Springfield, when the four-mile course was inaugurated. In 1878, however, the event was held on the Thames, and with the exception of three years since that time the event has been an annual fixture and on the Thames course. Yale holds the record for the four-mile course, having covered this distance in 1888 in 20 minutes and 10 seconds.

Three May Be Drowned.
The remnants of a log raft were hauled ashore at Spalding, Idaho, Thursday, on which were three coats, a roll of blankets and some lumber. It is believed the owners of the coats and blankets are drowned. Their names are believed to be Elmer Dillon of Orofino, J. M. Adams of Orofino and Charley Sublet. No trace of the men has been found.

Drowned in Slough.
Roy Hutchinson, aged 23, a farm hand employed by Dan Eldred, a ranchman, about three miles below Vancouver, Wash., was drowned Thursday morning while out looking for some horses. Hutchinson went up a small slough to head off some stock and was thrown from his horse into the water.

BACK TO THE FARM SAYS SECRETARY WILSON

Secretary Wilson conveys to the American people the more than welcome information that the desertion of the farms for city life, which has been going on at an alarming rate for the last 20 years, seems to have come to an end, and that something like a reaction has set in.

If this is true, nothing could be a more hopeful sign for the future prosperity and happiness of this country. Until a few years ago American cities prided themselves greatly on their rapid growth in population and never wearied of presenting statistical tables showing an annual increase of 10 to 20 per cent. After a while it was observed that all the cities not only of this country, but of all countries, were growing in the same way. Finally it dawned on our understandings that the farms were being proportionately deserted, and that what we had been priding ourselves on was nothing more nor less than a deplorable national disease. What we had hailed as solid municipal muscle and fat was seen to be dropping wind and water.

This wild flight of the country people to the cities is something of a mystery, because it has taken place simultaneously with an immense amelioration of the loneliness and hardships of farm life. In our day the farmer's gate, the letter carrier hands him his mail, and a bus call to take his children to school. Farm work is now beginning to be done by storage batteries. The farmer is no longer compelled to manufacture everything he needs, but can buy it for a trifle at the nearest town. On his tables are the finest periodicals and books in the world; he reads them by an electric light; he telephones his orders around the farm or his gossip to his neighbors, and rides to the depot in an automobile.

How is it that men so pleasantly situated, with the sweet privilege of looking nature in the face, breathing unpolluted air, drinking pure water, and eating pure food, can give it up for the grime and filth, the smoke and stench, the close quarters and adulterated food, the starvation wages and incessant strikes, lockouts and mobs of the city will always be regarded as an insoluble problem.

Not only do the farmers wrong themselves when they flock to the city, but they inflict a terrible injury on society. Agriculture is paralyzed and the cities are glutted, impoverished and corrupted. When they have come to the city and make themselves and everybody else miserable they then propose as a remedy not a return to the farm, but—socialism.

"Back to the farm" should be the watchword of Americans. It is to be feared that Secretary Wilson is far too sanguine, but if his prognostication is correct, it is the best news this country has heard since the surrender of Appomattox.—Chicago Tribune.

Horrible Accident.

Dell, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Weaver, was the victim of a horrible runaway accident yesterday afternoon near the Weaver mill and the boy is in a serious condition, says the Elgin Recorder. Owing to the lateness of the hour it was impossible to obtain all particulars. Both bones of the right leg were broken just above the ankle and several pieces of bone removed. The left knee was broken and dislocated and the front part of the skull fractured. He received several painful cuts and bruises on the head and one severe wound on the back of the head. Dr. Whiting reports his condition as very serious. The boy is about 14 years of age.
