"Where All Are Pleased"

GOVERNMENT IS FIGHTING PEST

In 1908 the government began to carry out this campaign, and in 1911 worked on a large scale; it was so successful that in 1912 the quantity of poison put out was doubled. This year's campaign is one of cleaning up the areas where there was almost complete extermination in 1912.

LOBBY PROBE HEARS STRONG CHARGES MADE

Manufacturers' association. "We'll sift the whole affair to the bottom," said Overmann. "We will call everyone named by Mulhall. I don't want to express opinion on the Mulhall article, it's so circumstantial in detail and must be threshed out." Overmann expects to receive all documents that Mulhall alleges he has in his possession to support his charges. Mulhall tells of work against honest congressmen.

The nature and extent of the disclosures that were expected were outlined in an article published under the sworn signature of Mr. Mulhall in the New York World and the Chicago Tribune. The statement purports to be Mr. Mulhall's personal history of the report from 1903 to 1912 of the National Association of Manufacturers and bristles with the names of congressmen whom he alleges were "subservient" or who were punished for their opposition to legislation favored by the association.

The allegations that he had helped to defeat congressmen who opposed the interests of the manufacturers, that this organization had spent thousands of dollars to elect congressmen expected to be sympathetic to their influence, and that he had aided in securing favorable members on committees that handled labor legislation; and that his association had used great efforts to secure the establishment of a federal tariff commission in 1908 as a means of delaying tariff revision, are contained in the long article under Mr. Mulhall's name.

Pendleton Stands Well.

That Pendleton is now spoken of with more kindness than is any other small city in the northwest is declared by T. C. Taylor who is up from Portland for a few days. In Portland Mr. Taylor meets many people from Washington, Oregon and Idaho and in recent months has heard general praise for Pendleton and for the business conditions in this town which are recognized as being good. In contrast with this view of Pendleton he has heard many tales indicating that some of our neighboring places are not in flourishing shape.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT ISSUE

ling to talk upon the subject, Col. J. H. Raley was brief but emphatic.

"I am strongly in favor of it," declared Colonel Raley. "I should like to see the amendment submitted."

W. L. Thompson of the American National bank said that the commission form is the only form and that he is highly in favor of it for Pendleton.

"It is the only system," he said. "We cannot expect men to give their time to the affairs of the city without compensation. I would favor a commission government with salaries say of $1200 a year each to three men, one of these to be chosen as mayor. I should also favor a provision in the amendment that these men devote half their time to the business affairs of the city. I am sure that such a plan would induce the best men to seek and accept the nominations. Under a commission form we have a centralized system and the responsibility for the good management of city affairs rests with this system."

Leon Cohen was unqualified in his endorsement. "There is no question at all," he said, "of the desirability of the commission government. It would give us a better system. I am sure that if the question is submitted again, it will carry easily, and certainly Pendleton should have this system."

G. I. LaDow expressed about the same opinion. "I think I am in favor of it," he declared. "If the proper candidates are up for office, it would give us an improved system of government over the present one. I think however, that the success of the commission government would depend largely upon the selection of the officers."

F. E. Livengood, another prominent business man, said that he thought the commission form would be a good thing. "Although I have not studied it thoroughly, it seems to have been a success in other towns and I am strongly in favor of it here. I believe that it would prove a success and be an improvement in many ways over the old form."

E. J. Murphy in Favor. As an example how opinion has changed since the proposition was submitted before, the expression of E. J. Murphy, another well known business man, indicates generally how the sentiment in the city now tends towards the commission form. Mr. Murphy two years ago was strenuously opposed to anything that savored of the commission government. Today he is just the opposite in his attitude and is as favorable to it at this time as he was opposed to it two years ago.

"The commission form," said Mr. Murphy, "gives us a system where we can place the responsibility on the men at the helm. Two years ago, I was opposed to the commission. Now I am highly in favor of it. It centralizes the responsibility, and would give Pendleton a business administration which would be more efficient than any other form I know."

The above expressions of leading business men of the city show that apparently there is a dissatisfaction with the old idea in municipal government. As referred to at the beginning, the one man who voiced what could be called doubt, was Mr. Gray of Gray brothers, but his doubt was tintured with the willingness to try the commission form and he was willing to admit that there might be more good in the system than in the present form of government. He said that he did not believe the city could have any better council than it has at present and that he believed it would be better to let the same plan remain in effect. However, as to whether another term would bring in to the city administration as good and efficient a set of men as the present, he was not prepared to say and felt that in this regard the commission form might be better able to handle a question of the desirability of city officials better than the system now in use.

More expressions of opinions will be given in tomorrow's issue of the East Oregonian. It is the desire to give the ideas of the women as well as the men upon this question, and several of the prominent women of the city will be interviewed.
