FAN FODDER

Pendleton opens this afternoon on the Round-up diamond with a six-game series with Walla Walla. The Bears are just as strong as they have been all season while the Bucks haven't been going like pennant winners. The dope is all for the visitors but you never can tell about a ball game.

Besides getting a trial in faster company, Rader's purchase by the White Sox nets him a healthy role of the long green. The purchase price was $750 and $250 of that amount goes to the player, who largely brought about the transaction through his friendship with Eugene Doyle, the Chicago scout.

Vice President Ritner this morning received a telegram from President Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox giving Pendleton permission to keep Rader until a man is secured to fill his boots. An effort is now being made to land Naughton, former La Grande infielder.

"The Psychology of the Stump" is the title of an article in a recent issue of the "Baseball Magazine." We commend it to McKune and his men for a serious perusal and may they profit by it.

Naughton, who may take Rader's place, pitched seven innings of shut-out ball for the La Grande Moose team against Enterprise Sunday. It was the first time he ever did slab duty and all he had was a wind-up but he got away with it.

Connie Starkell, memories of whom still make local fans scowl, got in bad with North Yakima fans last week and, according to reports, was chased over the center field fence after one game. However, he will hold the indicator in that town this week while Russ Hall will do duty here. We should worry.

"Boise had all of the luck all of the time," is the way Umpire Russ Hall partly explains the long series of defeats handed to the Bucks last week and the week before. "Pendleton never got a break and played much better ball than the results would indicate."

CHICAGO UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR SAYS SCHOOLS DON'T FIT YOUTH FOR DUTIES AS GOOD CITIZENS

CHICAGO, July 15.—American schools under the present system of education do not fill the place they should in fitting boys and girls for manhood and womanhood, according to Professor W. D. MacClintock, of the University of Chicago. Prof. MacClintock has long advocated radical reforms in American schools which he believes will tend to make the young graduates fitted to take up their duties as citizens. Today he gave to the United Press his ideas as to the changes needed, as follows:

"The test of our school system is whether it prepares our young people to take vital places in a real, social world—a world of all the people, a world of real, not accidental needs and service. In many ways our schools are still unsocial. They do not give the young people what is needed to make them self-supporting when they leave and go out into the world. They do not give them the things which society is glad to pay them for.

"In many ways our women are the more 'unsocial' of the two sexes, and our schools for girls, of course with some exceptions, especially fail to train young women to be helpful members of society, and the word society is not used in the narrow, limited sense. Girls are trained in cultivated, but 'unsocial' seclusion. They are taught to be members of a false 'society' on money they do not earn and do not know how it is earned, on scale which the world really cannot afford, and with a social exclusiveness and snobbery which isolates them from the vast majority of mankind.

"In order to be genuinely social, the individual must begin to make a return to society for what he or she has so long been receiving. And this return must be in some vital kind of service which society needs.

"For a matter of twenty years on the average young people of today are 'receivers' only; they have taken food, clothing, shelter, the experience of others, leisure and play. But while they have been receiving all this gratis few of them have had it made plain to them that they were like a building in the course of construction which, when completed at the end of twenty years, must be put to good use. They can become social only by enthusiastically giving back to society for the rest of their lives something worth while. And this law of return may be stated not as a duty, a self-sacrifice, a service, but as a pleasure of the highest kind, and a privilege. Of all things most needed young people need to be taught that no one ever gets something for nothing. The something received, must be paid for some time.

"Again, we become social by learning to work, to know and respect labor. Idleness is the greatest social sin. The individual should be expertly capable of clothing, feeding, sheltering and entertaining himself or herself, and should receive no certification of graduation, no diploma, until he can prove the ability to do so.

"He must know what his pleasure and support cost in human labor and no mature person should be allowed to think the world owes him a living or that he is free to live on the labor of others without making a return in kind.

"Being social implies co-operation—the difficult art of working, not for but with others. It is much easier to work alone, to sacrifice oneself. Co-operation means respect for others, consideration, toleration, limiting one's selfish tendencies, agreeing to work in common, patience with faults of others, refusal to have what others have not unless it has been earned by more work or as a reward. A social person is one who is capable of rapid and pleasant exchange of ideas. It means meeting and parting with persons of all classes and neither giving nor receiving harm. Good breeding, justice and a sense of humor are the three essentials for this.

"The social realization is often best accomplished by working with others for some higher ideal. It is difficult to be social with ones immediate competitor, but even two rivals can operate together toward some common good. All modern communities offer higher social institutions in which the individual selfishness and egotism can be lost in the work for the good of all—schools, social betterment, play, physical improvement of cities, the institutions of religion.

"No one can be finally social who insists on dividing men into fixed classes. We must all be members of the same class. Present day education tends to make us unsocial by making us exclusive. Finally, one becomes social by linking the past with the present, and development of hope in the future. Until our schools teach these things they will continue to turn out into the world every year thousands who, it is true have made high records in their studies, but who will be found unfit when they are tested as to their ability to make their own way in the world."

Surprising Cure of Stomach Trouble

When you have trouble with your stomach or chronic constipation, don't imagine that your case is beyond help just because your doctor fails to give you relief—Mrs. G. Stengle, Plainfield, N. J., writes, "For over a month past I have been troubled with my stomach. Everything I ate upset it terribly. One of Chamberlain's advertising booklets came to me. After reading a few of the letters from people who had been cured by Chamberlain's Tablets, I decided to try them. I have taken nearly three fourths of a package of them and can now eat almost everything that I want." For sale by all dealers.

Case Before Grand Jury.

PORTLAND, July 15.—W. W. Robinson, arrested Saturday night in Belknap charged with larceny by embezzlement of over $18,000 from the firm of Robinson and Company, hat-makers, which filed a petition in bankruptcy several days ago in the federal court here, appeared in the district court today and waived examination. The case will go before the grand jury.
