Cease-Fire Talks In Fourth Week; Progress Slow

By Homer Jenks
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Cease-Fire talks in Korea entered their fourth week today, but it looks as though the shooting and the killing will continue for at least as many more weeks.

Even farther away—perhaps months away—is any large-scale American withdrawal from that unhappy, battle-devastated peninsula.

When will the war end? The most authoritative guess on that question has come from U. S. defense secretary George C. Marshall. He told a congressional sub-committee that the peace talks probably would continue into early September.

Communist newsmen in Kaesong speculated to United Nations correspondents that the armistice would be concluded sometime between Aug. 15 and 18.

Still Not Convinced
Some UN newsmen covering the peace talks have predicted agreement within a week, but that seems overly optimistic in the light of the obstacles already encountered or still awaiting the negotiators.

What's more, the United Nations are still far from convinced the communists really want peace in Korea.

President Truman warned only Saturday: "We do not yet know whether the communists really desire peace in Korea or whether they are simply trying to gain by negotiations what they have not been able to gain by conquest."

However, the reds so far have indeed they are sincere in their desire for a cease-fire. They have backed down twice on key issues. First they agreed to demilitarize the conference city of Kaesong. Then they gave up their demand for withdrawal of foreign troops from Korea as a condition of an armistice.

New Showdown Seen
Now another showdown appears in the offing. The reds have demanded that an armistice line be drawn along the 38th parallel and a demilitarized buffer zone extend six miles on either side of it. The allies say the line should be along the present fighting front.

Even if the two delegations are able to find a way out of that deadlock, the next point on their agenda gives promise of producing just as prolonged debate. This provides for agreement on the composition, authority and functions of an organization to supervise the carrying out of armistice terms.

Inasmuch as neither side can be considered the victor in this war, the negotiators first will have to decide whether they will send inspection teams into each other's camp to insure compliance with the armistice, or whether the task shall be entrusted to neutral parties.

Inspection Problem
Then will come the question of how far into rear areas these teams shall be permitted. The communists have shown a marked reluctance in the past to permit outsiders a glimpse of their armies. The allies contend that supervision and inspection teams should be permitted as far back

Commended

Cpl. Frederick H. Stenkamp, Bend, has been recognized for meritorious service in Korea.

Bend Soldier Is Commended

Cpl. Frederick H. Stenkamp, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Stenkamp, 33 Gilchrist, has been named to receive the commendation ribbon with metal pendant, for meritorious service in Korea during the period Sept. 20 to Dec. 23, 1950, while assigned to X corps cryptographic section.

In addition to his superior, Cpl. Stenkamp in one instance, as the only enlisted code operator with an advance echelon of X corps, was primarily responsible for processing the extremely high load of 13,000 code groups in a 24-hour period.

The young army man was graduated from Bend high school with the class of 1946. He entered the service in September, 1948, and went overseas in July, 1949.

In addition to the commendation ribbon, Cpl. Stenkamp holds the presidential unit citation with three oak leaf clusters, the good conduct medal and ribbons for the Japanese occupation, the Philippine theater and the Korean campaign. At present he is stationed in Tokyo. He was evacuated from Hungnam with other members of the 10th corps a short time before Christmas.

as the Manchurian border. Aerial reconnaissance also should be permitted that far north, the allies contend.

If these points can be settled, agreement on the rest of the armistice agenda should follow quickly.

But even once a cease-fire has taken effect, American and other UN soldiers will have to remain in Korea to guard against any breakdown in the armistice and any surprise communist attack before a final settlement.

A South Korean government spokesman said yesterday that UN troops would be needed in Korea for at least a year after a cease-fire. After that, he suggested, the South Korean army might be able to guard the nation's security.

national committee than like the administration's top foreign policy spokesman in congress. The senator is up for renomination and reelection next year. He is one of those who has let Mr. Truman know he'd like to see Acheson out of the state department.

Connally is in more difficulty than many democrats who hope next year to return to congress, because the anti-Truman movement in Texas is away to a fast start. Almost any administration democrat can expect serious primary election trouble in Texas next year.

Acheson is not the only symbol of Texas rebellion. Civil rights and so-called welfare state programs are factors in many southern states. But quite as hot in Texas is the dispute over ownership of offshore oil lands. President Truman demands federal ownership. Connally got on record about that a few days ago. He said it was a step toward socialism. He hopes the voters back home have been listening.

The Dalles Riot Case Before Jury

Portland, July 31 (AP)—A jury of six men and six women began deliberation at noon today on three damage suits against the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's union as the result of the 1948 "hot" pineapple riot at The Dalles, Ore.

The jury took the case after more than two weeks of deliberation in the court of Judge James Alger Fee.

Plaintiffs are the Hawaiian pineapple company and two of its employees, Raymond Curto and Clarence Rosales.

The combined suits are aimed at the ILWU, its Portland local and 99 individual union members. The company claims the longshore union prevented the unloading of its shipment of canned pineapple at The Dalles and caused heavy financial loss to its 1949 operation.

Curto and Rosales seek a total of $144,000 for injuries they allegedly received in beatings at the hands of longshoremen in the riot.

In his instructions to the jury, Judge Fee said that any verdict reached would have to be unanimous. He said the jury should find in favor of the defendants if it determines the union acted legally and only in regards to wages, hours and working conditions in The Dalles dispute.

However, the judge ruled that if one of the union's objects in the dispute was collective bargaining but another was to induce employees not to deal with the plaintiff, then the plaintiff should prevail.

The riot occurred when the longshoremen reported tried to stop the unloading of the pineapple barge when it arrived from Hawaii where the ILWU was on strike.
