Unsettled weather in offing here

Central Oregon is enjoying its mildest weather in two weeks, but forecasts indicate more unsettled weather is in the offing.

Temperatures ranged well into the 40's over the weekend, to melt the light pack of snow that covered the Rend area. Mild weather reached even into the high coun-

This morning, all routes over the Cascades were in good winter shape, but four inches of new snow was measured at Govern-ment Camp. Packed snow covered the Santiam, from which flurries were reported. There were spots of ice on the Willamette.

Despite moderating temperathe sun failed to show, except for a few brief periods, in the Bend area over the weekend.

The five-day forecast calls for considerable moisture east of the mountains, with precipitation, possibly as much as three-tenths of an inch, expected to be in the form of snow. Temperatures as low as 20 degrees have been predicted for the higher valleys of Oregon, with recurring rains pre-dicted for the coast.

The Senate Armed Services Committee said Powers will ap-pear at a public hearing. It will be the flier's first public appearance since he was released from a Soviet prison last mouth.

The committee's decision was announced after CIA Director John A. McCone told lawmakers he was satisfied with Powers' con-duct both before and after he was downed inside the Soviet Union in May, 1960.
